Cutting Up for the Girls

"A few" little girls are going to be thrilled tomorrow when they receive the results of the Valentine's toil of 11-year-old Byron Wright, 2928 Blackwood. Byron wouldn't say whether "a few" means one or ten. But he blushed a little. (See story on Page 5.)

Britain at Odds with Stand

U.S. Refuses To Appease Reds With Nationalist Island Chain

Little Hope Seen To End Fighting

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has told Britain that it is out of the question to surrender any Nationalist-held coastal islands to the Chinese Communists merely in the hope of inducing the Reds to stop fighting.

Britain has officially advised the United States of its view that all the coastal islands—including the Quemoys and Matsus—belong to Red China, although the Reds should not fight to get them.

Some U.S. officials fear this notification was the beginning of British pressure to get the United States to induce Nationalist China to turn more and more of the islands over to the Reds.

U.S. policy does not, in fact, rule out the possibility some day of a settlement which would let the coastal islands go to the Communists in return for a firm Communist agreement recognizing a non-Communist status for Formosa.

LONG WAY OFF

But any such deal now appears to be a long way in the future and officials said that, so long as the Peiping government continues to assert its intention to capture Formosa, the United States considers Quemoy, the Matsus and perhaps other off-shore islands to be strategically important for Formosa's defense.

Some days ago Premier Chou En-lai of Red China was reported in dispatches from London to have let it be known that while he would not negotiate a formal cease-fire, he would accept one if the Chinese Nationalists would get out of all the coastal islands.

U.S. officials said privately that under this proposal the free world would be "appeasing" Chou while he retained without check his announced designs on Formosa.

Differences between London and Washington over the Quemoy-Matsu island line become potentially more significant now that the evacuation of the Tachen islands far to the north has been completed.

A new period in the Formosa crisis, concentrated on diplomatic efforts for peace, is opening up and agreement between the United States and Britain—the maintenance of a co-operative if not solid front on major Formosa questions—will prove more important than in the recent past.

LONDON (AP)—The Soviet Union disclosed Saturday it is plugging for a Geneva-type conference on Formosa with the Chinese Reds at the table and the Chinese Nationalists left out in the cold.

Moscow radio announced that foreign minister V. M. Molotov had proposed that Britain and India join in trying to persuade the United States to agree to a 10-nation meeting either in Shanghai or New Delhi later this month.

In Washington, informed officials said Britain and the United States have decided such a conference without Nationalist China would be unproductive and have rejected the proposal.

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — The U.S. 7th Fleet returned to Formosa Sunday with the evacuated Tachen garrison but even before it arrived the Nationalists reported armed Communist junks massing near Matsu—an island the nationalists hope the fleet will defend.

Talks Avert Strike Action By CBC Men

OTTAWA (CP)—A strike of CBC radio and television technicians was averted late Saturday when negotiators reached a basis of settlement in the contract dispute.

A joint announcement by the CBC and the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians (CIO-CCL) said the tentative agreement is subject to ratification by the CBC and the union's 775 members in the corporation.

Details of the agreement were not disclosed.

The announcement was made at the labor department headquarters by Andre Lapointe, CBC industrial relations chief, and Timothy J. O'Sullivan, the union's international representative in Canada.

The two officials headed negotiation teams which conferred for several hours during the day in the presence of labor department conciliators.

After the joint statement was issued, a CBC spokesman said there remain a few details to be ironed out but that this is expected to be done today or Monday.

NO STATEMENTS

Pending negotiation of the remaining details, representatives of the CBC and the union have agreed to make no further statements concerning what will be in the contract.

The often-adjourned negotiations between the two disputants resumed after top officials of both sides met separately with labor department officers.

The strike could have crippled CBC radio and TV broadcasting, but the CBC stated it had made plans to carry on with a reorganized and part-time service.

The union claimed—and the CBC denied — that it had obtained a copy of the corporation's plan for continuing operations during a strike.

O'Sullivan said the plan involved a deal with another union for strike-breaking.

Airmen Safe After Crash In Bomber

WINNIPEG (CP) — Two American air force men, suffering only bruises and scratches, were safe Saturday night following the early-morning twilight crash of their stratojet bomber over northern Saskatchewan.

The fate of two other crew members is still not known.

Returns to House

GEORGE DREW

Fully recovered from the serious illness that struck him in November, Conservative leader George Drew will take his seat in the House of Commons early this week for the first time this session, according to Tom Green, Colonist Ottawa correspondent. Conservative parliamentarians will welcome him at a dinner Wednesday night.

Antigua Next Stop For Royal Tourist

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (Reuters)—Some 12,000 children staged a rally for Princess Margaret before her departure from Barbados on the next stage of her West Indies tour.

After inspecting the rally at Garrison Savannah, near St. Ann's Fort, and hearing the children sing, she was to go to Bridgetown's Trafalgar Square to review a farewell guard of honor mounted by the Barbados Regiment.

Soon afterwards, the Royal yacht Britannia was to set out on the 300-mile voyage to Antigua, next port of call on Margaret's month-long tour.

Friday the princess went swimming for the second consecutive day at the private beach owned by Ronald Tree, former British Conservative Member of Parliament for Market Harborough. She is a childhood friend of Tree's sons, Michael and Jeremy.

She also attended the Barbados trade and industry fair in Queen's Park, and clapped when a band played a special number entitled "All Hail the Royal Princess." It was composed in her honor by V. A. Southwell, a local school teacher.

Defends Film Stars

One of Hollywood's best-known citizens is a man who has never appeared on a movie screen. He is Jerry Giesler, the fabulous attorney whose chief job is keeping film personalities out of jail. A three-part series on Giesler's career, in which he has defended stars from Valentino to Marilyn Monroe, begins today on Page 3.

Old Friends May Meet

LONDON (AP) — Marshal Georgi Zhukov, new Russian defense minister, would like to visit his wartime friend, President Eisenhower, when relations between their nations improve, Moscow radio said Saturday night.

Return Of Tots Asked

NELSON, B.C. (CP)—A delegation of about 30 Sons of Freedom Doukhobors called on Emmet W. Gulley, secretary of the local co-ordinating committee on Doukhobors, here Saturday and asked his assistance in having their children returned.

More than 70 Freedomite children are wards of the department of welfare at New Denver where they are schooled and cared for in a converted sanitarium.

The children were taken into custody when their parents were jailed or refused to send them to public school.

Mr. Gulley advised the Freedomites, mostly women, to avail themselves of the legal processes provided.

BULLETINS

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Film star Gail Russell, already facing trial for drunk driving, surrendered last night to police officers for questioning in a hit-run accident.

* * *

HANEY, B.C. (CP)—Two persons were killed Saturday night when the car in which they were riding plowed into the railing of Kanaka bridge, 1½ miles east of here.

* * *

SARASOTA, Fla. (UP) — House minority leader Joseph W. Martin predicted last night that President Eisenhower would run for re-election in 1956.

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Globe wireless radio station here yesterday intercepted an SOS from a ship which identified itself as the Ss. Thorncomb and requested immediate assistance.

De Gaullists Spurn Pflimlin

PARIS (UP)—The powerful right-wing followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle refused last night to join the proposed government of Premier-Designate Pierre Pflimlin, greatly reducing his chances of winning National Assembly approval next week.

However, the 48-year-old Pflimlin still may succeed in forming a cabinet to replace the government of Pierre Mendes-France ousted by the assembly last Saturday.

Southern New Brunswick Hit By Driving, Rain-Lashed Gale

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—A rain-lashed gale raked southern News Brunswick with winds gusting to 90 miles an hour Saturday, leaving scenes reminiscent of Hurricane Edna's ravages last September.

The storm formed suddenly over the New England states and moved across the border with little warning, tearing down hydro wires and disrupting communications.

Thirty head of cattle had to be destroyed when a barn collapsed before the battering winds at nearby Lancaster. Near Moncton, a 50-foot brick chimney crashed atop a glass greenhouse and winds ripped a porch roof from a house and planted it high in a tree.

Power failures were general throughout southern New Brunswick and almost half the telephone lines from Saint John were down. Police roped off the downtown plant of the New Brunswick Power Commission when winds snapped lines leading from the building.

HIGHWAY FLOODED

A foot of water flooded the Moncton Highway near here and high seas on the Bay of Fundy kept the Digby, N.S., ferry Princess Helene tied up at her pier.

Live wires fell across a factory in Moncton, starting five minor fires and causing $500 damage.

Nova Scotia was caught in the fringe of the storm, but winds gusted to 65 miles an hour at Shearwater naval air station, near Halifax.

The 16,000-ton Greek liner Nea Hellas manoeuvred about the harbor for three hours before pilots could tie her up.

Chrysler Local Votes To Strike

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Workers at the Chrysler Motor Co. plant here Saturday voted in favor of strike action if necessary to back up contract demands now in negotiation.

Movieland Nominates Top Choices for Annual Oscar Awards

GRACE KELLY

AUDREY HEPBURN

DOROTHY DANDRIDGE

JUDY GARLAND

MARLON BRANDO

BING CROSBY

HUMPHREY BOGART

JAMES MASON

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Judy Garland, Grace Kelly, Jane Wyman, Audrey Hepburn and Dorothy Dandridge were nominated last night for the annual "Oscar" award as "Best Actress of 1954."

The workers of movieland also named their five choices for best actor, best motion picture and "best" of everything else that goes into making screen plays.

Nominated for the "Best Actor" award, to be handed out with the other "Oscars" by the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences March 30, were:

Marlon Brando, the tough dockworker of "On the Waterfront"; Bing Crosby, the has-been singer who loses himself in alcohol in "The Country Girl"; Humphrey Bogart, the tyrannical "Captain Queeg" of "The Caine Mutiny"; Dan O'Herlihy, who played the title role in "Robinson Crusoe," and James Mason, the alcoholic actor who commits suicide in "A Star Is Born."

Miss Wyman played the doctor's wife in "Magnificent Obsession," the 1954 version of the best-seller of the 1930s. Miss Kelly attempted to save Crosby in "The Country Girl." Miss Garland was the unknown girl who rose to stardom in "A Star Is Born." and Miss Hepburn was the chauffeur's daughter in love with her father's employer in "Sabrina."

Miss Dandridge, the first Negro nominated for a "Best Actress" award, played the cigarette girl in "Carmen Jones."

The five best movies were:

"Caine Mutiny," from the best-seller and stage play about a mutiny aboard a U.S. destroyer escort vessel;

"On the Waterfront," the tough story of labor racketeering on the docks;

"The Country Girl," from Clifford Odet's story of the alcoholic singer who is a has-been;

"Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," a backwoods musical;

"Three Coins in the Fountain," the story of three girls in Italy seeking romance.

Five film beauties were nominated for best supporting actress of last year. They were Jan Sterling, Eva Marie Saint, Claire Trevor, Nina Foch and Katy Jurado.

"On the Waterfront" walked off with three of the five nominations for the "Best Supporting Actor" role by placing Lee Cobb, Karl Malden and Rod Steiger on the ballot for the finals. The other two nominees were Tom Tully, for his work in "The Caine Mutiny" and Edmond O'Brien, who played in "The Barefoot Contessa."

The nominees were unveiled with all the splendor of a big Hollywood premiere on a lavish television show and "nominee" parties in plush Hollywood niteries.

It was the first time in the academy's 27-year-old history that filmville made a big event out of the nominations. In the past the production has come only on the final announcement of the winners, to be made this year on March 30.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

THE heart has had its time. You'll still find it on some Valentine cards, true, but it's dated. In the cant language of art and literary critics, it isn't contemporary.

Physiologists long ago exploded the idea that the heart is the seat of the emotions. But popular knowledge, as usual, lags behind science.

Valentines of the future may carry a picture of some other internal organ—perhaps the liver. That would be more appropriate for this bilious age.

We moderns are great ones for dispelling myths and illusions. So we should be prepared to receive Valentine cards bearing a picture of the spleen, or perhaps the vermiform appendix.

You know that proverb about the way to a man's heart being through his stomach? Well, it's old hat. The girls aren't interested in reaching a man's heart any more. They know that even if they do get there, they won't find anything more exciting than some auricles and ventricles, and a couple of valves, corroded around the hinges by nicotine.

Nobody wants to go on a tedious pilgrimage through the vital organs these days. Contemporary Valentines therefore are likely to carry pictures of the stomach itself.

For funny Valentines, they will have pictures of a diaphragm contorted with hiccoughs.

Valentines for "that special Somebody" will carry a cross-sectional micrograph of a ganglion being activated by a nerve impulse of the kind which in former days was described by the quaint title of "Love."

Recently I heard a little girl reciting one of those playground rhymes, which usually are said with ever-increasing speed to accompany the movement of a skipping rope.

I can't remember the verses now, but they were long and distinctly gamey. The little girl said them in a gabble, looking pleased with herself, and obviously not understanding what the verses meant.

In fact the verses had no meaning, in the literal sense, but they conjured up a swarm of images, many of them strongly unpleasant.

They might well have been written by Ezra Pound or T. S. Eliot—except that the verses were probably old before Mr. Pound and Mr. Eliot were born.

It is a curious process—the handing down of such verses from one age-group to another, until generations have passed. Learned and very dull books could be written about playground rhymes.

Teachers would have an easier job if little girls applied themselves as fervently to lessons as they do to memorizing a skipping-rope song.

Expense-Sharing Caravan Holiday Turns Out To Be Happy Honeymoon

(The author, a Canadian who from being a minister of the Gospel, became "King of the Safecrackers" in the United States, now lives quietly among us on Vancouver Island. He concludes his story in Chapter 24 today.)

BY HERBERT EMERSON WILSON

(Copyright, Canada, 1955, by Herbert Emerson Wilson and The Daily Colonist)

That evening, and all the next day, I thought a lot about my visitor and her offer. Oddly, I found that both my interest in her as a person, and my determination not to sell the caravan, increased with the passing hours.

By the time she returned, next evening, I was quite determined to reject her offer even if she was ready to pay the full price.

We exchanged greetings and she entered the caravan, smiling all the while. In her, too, I sensed an increased interest both in myself and in the caravan. It was a bit of a surprise when she said, in a moment:

"I'm afraid the price of the caravan is beyond me."

This was what I'd wanted to hear, but just as I started to imagine myself off alone all summer, camping and fishing as I liked, she made a suggestion:

"While I'm not able to buy the caravan, I wondered if you'd consider us traveling together? We could share the current expenses on a 50-50 basis. You could sleep in the caravan, I on a cot in a tent outside, because I'm used to roughing it.

"You seem to be a clean-living, tidy person with a liking for outdoor life, camping and fishing. My interests are the same. I'm alone, you are alone, we both need companionship, so why shouldn't we get along?"

The proposition left me speechless for awhile. Then, thinking it over and watching her all the time, I said:

"Perhaps we could arrange such a business deal. When would you like to start?"

She had some personal matters to settle, but could be ready in about a month. I said I'd think her plan over, and let her know. She gave me her name (Amelia will do for here) and address, and departed with my name and my bank address, where I received all my mail.

Lying in bed that night sleep evaded me altogether as I mulled over Amelia's suggestion. Finally, in the middle of the night I rose, got my typewriter, and wrote her a letter accepting the whole idea.

Two days later she called again, when we shook hands to bind our agreement. Then days of planning followed, as we made ready for our journey.

One major question bothered both of us: What should be our alibi, or explanation to others, for our being together? Should I masquerade as her older brother, as her father, as her husband?

For myself I was not concerned, but Amelia was a member of a respectable family with no moral stain upon her character.

A few days went by in which we considered all the angles, then we found ourselves both slyly hinting that, from a social standpoint as well as from our personal feelings, marriage would be the logical thing.

A toast sealed our compact, and we proceeded at once with detailed planning. Defying convention and superstition, we decided to be married Friday, April 13, 1951. The ceremony was performed by a commissioner at the marriage license bureau and without fanfare we started on our honeymoon—with Spanish Banks as the first stop.

Our itinerary, with fishing for me and scenery for Amelia's painting in mind, had been drawn up for me by Vancouver's Pintail and Lee Straight. We were never disappointed.

From Spanish Banks we went up into the interior—over the Hope-Princeton highway—with stops at Hornet Lake and many other places where we fished and explored widely.

We were away about six months, making friends all along the way among white people and Indians alike, residents and other tourists included.

That winter we lived in the caravan in Vancouver, then in the spring traded it for a cottage and bit of property in Surrey. Amelia and I got busy with the cottage, repairing and decorating it, and within a few weeks sold it for almost double the value of our trade.

Our next home was at Cove Cliff in North Vancouver, but we grew restless there. Amelia found our caravan again, and repurchased it for half-price. Rebuilding our wheeled home, we set out again, this time on a tour of Vancouver Island.

In November, 1952, we settled here at Courtenay, where we both like the people, the town and the fishing. Selling the old caravan, we bought a cottage by the river.

We're content and happy—and we're building another caravan to take care of the next urge to wander.

Reformed Criminal Urges:

Prohibit Pistols To Curb Crime

Views of an ex-criminal on the outlawing of revolvers are expressed in this article by a native of Canada who became "King of the Safecrackers" in the United States, paid for his wrongdoing in prison, and now lives on Vancouver Island.

BY HERBERT EMERSON WILSON

"This is a stick-up!"

How often we hear of those words, used by some pistol-whipping punk when he enters the store of an unprotected and frightened merchant.

If I were a politician I'd introduce a bill to do away with the revolver—the instrument of destruction, the all-powerful menace that encourages hoodlums as well as professional crooks to carry on their nefarious rackets.

Revolvers have always been, and now are, the main disturbers of society's equilibrium, constantly keeping the law-abiding citizens' nerves at highest tension, because of the boldness with which gunmen and racketeers invade Canadian homes, merchants' premises and banks, and stick up pedestrians on the streets.

A bill prohibiting the sale, use or ownership of revolvers should, in my opinion, apply to all firearms less than standardized rifle and shotgun length.

Moreover, the manufacturers of toy revolvers should come within the prohibition. This would make it rather difficult for the would-be stick-up man to simulate a real revolver.

The gunman, stripped of his sole protection, his "rod," becomes docile, harmless, cowardly.

The paramount purpose of prohibition of revolvers would be not only to render the active criminal helpless, but to impress on the mind of the potential criminal the futility of crime.

There are tremendous inroads being made yearly by suicide. Here, also, the principal weapon used is the revolver. Think of the many precious lives that might be saved if there were no revolvers at hand!

When a criminal, gunman or racketeer has been arrested, tried and convicted, the approximate cost to the taxpayers is $3,000. But that isn't all. I wish it were. For each year of his long prison term, the taxpayer must pay about $500 for the prisoner's maintenance, plus the pay of prison personnel.

What would be the reaction of the public if they, as individuals, were to receive from the government a bill for $500 every year, just before Christmas, for the upkeep of some pistol-whipping punk in the Big House?

The cold fact is, it really does cost taxpayers in Canada that astounding sum—and all because of crime committed, in most cases, because of a revolver held menacingly in the hand of a robber.

Every owner of a revolver is a potential murderer.

The criminal is ever ready to murder for his own self-protection in the event of a jam with the police. The non-criminal, during a heated argument or fight, not infrequently commits murder, because a revolver is ready to his hand.

Aside from the legitimate use police officers make of revolvers, what good are they? They are useless.

A bill prohibiting revolvers is greatly needed to stem the tide of atrocious and petty crimes being committed throughout Canada. It would be logical, timely, and above all, the only reasonably sure remedy for the greatest evil to which the Canadian people have ever been subjected.

Better Graft Veteran Soon

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS.

Peach Grafting—(F. E., Royal Oak). The best time to insert scions of other varieties into your Veteran peach is in early spring, just before growth starts. As Veteran is an early starter, and it looks like an early spring, I think you'd be well advised to get the job done immediately.

There is no particular harm done by waiting until the tree is in full leaf except that the March winds are rather drying, and it becomes a bit more difficult to keep the scion alive while union is taking place. If your scions are not too big, you might be able to construct a little air-tight tent of polythene plastic film around the completed graft, sealing the seams with Scotch tape. This will put each graft into a little greenhouse of its own.

* * *

Japanese Orange Tree—(J. A. M., Victoria). The seeds of oranges, lemons, and grapefruit will all germinate freely if sown in rather sandy soil and kept watered. It isn't easy to get them to flower, though, and your best bet with your Japanese orange seeds would be to sow from four to six of them together in a four-inch pot. Give them plenty of water and the sunniest window in the house, but no fertilizer. The congestion and crowding, plus the slim diet, will often force them into flowering while still quite young.

* * *

Early Lawn Mowing—(J.G.B., Oak Bay). You can't hurt your lawn by mowing it early, and especially after the mild fall and winter, and good growing weather we have had, a close mowing will do your lawn a lot of good.

Try to pick a dryish spell for the job, as it isn't good for the lawn to go walking on it when it is wet and soggy—it packs the soil and excludes air from the roots.

If you don't have a grass catcher on your mower, be sure to rake up all the clippings. These mowings are good for the lawn in summer, and when they are very small and finely chopped, but not at this season of the year, and not when the cut is heavy.

Garlic Culture—N.N.L., Nanaimo). You don't have to send away to a seedsman to buy garlic cloves for planting. The packaged bulbs you buy at the grocer's for cooking and flavoring are quite satisfactory.

Split the bulbs up into single cloves, and plant them just as you would onion sets, spacing them six inches apart in the row, with the tip of each clove just showing through the soil. Below the bulbs, where the roots will emerge, the soil should be loose and well worked, but the surface should be made very firm by treading around the bulbs. Lift in late July or early August, when the foliage turns yellow, and lay in a sunny place to dry off before storing.

Antirrhinum Rust — L. F. R., Victoria). Once a snapdragon plant is infected with the rust disease, there is no known cure, and the only thing to do is to pull up and burn ruthlessly any plants showing the little brown pustules on the undersides of the leaves.

While snapdragons are actually perennials, I am very much opposed to the practice of carrying old plants over the winter, as I believe this gives the disease a chance to get a real foothold, endangering both our own and our neighbors' gardens. My snaps are consigned to the incinerator every fall.

If you are setting out new snapdragon plants this spring, they had better go in a different site, as the soil is almost sure to be contaminated with the rust spores. If this move is impossible, then skim off the top two inches of soil, give the site a good dressing of hydrated lime, a cupful to the square yard, and replace with fresh, uncontaminated soil.

Top Criminal Attorney

Life Is but a Stage To Talented 'Actor'

In nearly half a century of legal practice Jerry Giesler has represented celebrities ranging from Rudolph Valentino to Marilyn Monroe. This is the first of three dispatches on this colorful movieland figure.

BY ALINE MOSBY

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—The Oscar entrants are warming up, but one of Hollywood's most talented actors will receive no award. In fact, he has never even appeared on a sound stage.

Jerry Giesler, a portly, balding, mild-mannered attorney, has yet to put on greasepaint, but he is one of the movie colony's most distinguished celebrities.

Film queen Shelley Winters says Giesler can "outact any actor in town," and, furthermore, he is one man who, before her divorce hearing, made Shelley obey when he told her to shut up.

Zsa Zsa Gabor, another blonde who went to court with Giesler, calls him "a gr-reat actor who is not afraid of the news cameras." Jerry was on hand when the cameras were pointed in Zsa Zsa's direction.

Giesler's courtroom histrionics and addiction to publicity have made him the West Coast's best-known criminal attorney and brought him nearly a half-century of exciting memories. Sitting in his dignified office, the attorney recently reminisced on some of the cases that brought him headlines.

On his desk sit two toy models of automobiles, souvenirs of a dramatic stunt that saved director Busby Berkeley from manslaughter charges 20 years ago.

In a desk drawer are a pair of lace panties, memo of the lawyer's co-starring appearance in court with stripper Lili St. Cyr.

CALL GIESLER

When celebrities get into trouble, they call Giesler. He defended Charlie Chaplin and Errol Flynn on morals charges and guided movie queens such as Marilyn Monroe and Bette Davis through divorces.

His most recent headlined cases were quietly kept from jury trials. Both clients—Robert Mitchum, charged with smoking marijuana, and producer Walter Wanger, accused of shooting agent Jennings Lang—went to jail.

Why didn't Giesler live up to his reputation of getting his customers acquitted?

Giesler denied today he was pressured by Hollywood studios to hush up these cases. He's convinced Mitchum was framed, he said, "but it would not have been of any benefit to Mitchum and his children to go through what would have been one of the most sensational trials around here."

"And, after all, a small sentence was involved (Mitchum got 60 days)," the lawyer continued. "I'm satisfied if he had gone on trial we would have established a conspiracy against Mitchum by outsiders. But it was far better to submit the case on the transcript of the preliminary examination.

"I'll never forget the morning of the trial," he laughed. "The press was waiting for the trial to start. Boy! Were they disappointed.

"Wanger, the same way. A number of innocent victims, his children. I'm sure he would have been acquitted but no good could have come of a sensational trial over such a small sentence."

PULLS ALL STOPS

But in other cases Giesler pulled out all the dramatic stops.

To save "White Flame" murderer Paul White, Giesler showed the court just how White found his wife and her lover.

Four years ago as seriously as if he were defending a murderer, he wrapped stripper Lili St. Cyr's huge white towel around his ample frame to show the jury she couldn't have offended a nightclub audience.

In 1943 he dragged celestial charts into court to show that young Peggy Satterlee couldn't have seen a moon through a porthole the night she claimed Errol Flynn violated her aboard his yacht.

Alderman Presses Censorship Claim

The mayor is "not satisfied to censor mail and keep meetings secret, but now is going to censor reports" to council, Ald. Donald Smith said last night.

The alderman was referring to the deletion from the agenda for last Thursday's council meeting of a report from the legality of disposing of the [illegible] site.

The mayor told council that since there was a rumor, "perhaps more than a rumor, that Her Majesty might require this property," that it would be a waste of time to hear the report.

After an Ottawa report that the defense department has no plans for the site, Alderman Smith claimed again the solicitor's report was withheld, to save face, because the plan for disposal of the property had been found to be illegal, as he had contended in the first place.

"Not only was it illegal to dispose of the property, but it was illegal under the mayor's own by-law to withold the report," Alderman Smith said.

Grenadiers' Stanley Does It Again And Coldstream Rivals Are Laughing

LONDON (NANA) — Britain's crack Grenadier Guards—the men who guard the Queen—are blushing tonight. Grenadier Stanley Couzens has escaped again.

Couzens went AWOL January 21 while being driven with other Guardsmen to mount guard on the Bank of England. He leaped out of a truck wearing his huge black bearskin hat. They caught him next day.

Four days later he footed it out of the barracks while being taken to see the adjutant. They caught him again.

In the guardroom Couzens, watched over by a gun-toting corporal, asked permission to go to the washroom. He hasn't been seen since.

There was an embarrassed silence from the regiment and the war office. Nobody was saying anything about how Couzens had done it again.

Said a Guards officer sadly, "The trouble is the Coldstreams (the Grenadiers' rival regiment) are in the barracks with us at the moment. And they are laughing at us."

Zoning Without Tears

THERE can be few communities on the North American Continent that have more tangible reasons than Victoria to regret haphazard and uncontrolled land use in the early stages of their development. This city was three-quarters developed and with 90 per cent of its civic services in before any sincere effort was made to plan for the future, with zoning as one means of control. Unfortunately those elementary efforts were nullified in considerable measure by inconstant changes in the zoning pattern. That has led to today's situation wherein the original zoning by-law has to be scrapped, and a wider and more comprehensive measure tried in its stead.

In two directions last week members and officials of the City's advisory planning commission made something of their purpose plainer. Objections over suggested James Bay revisions were met factually; while an outline speech before a local service club stated the aims. The commission came out well from both experiences, which will be followed in the case of James Bay with a public meeting to thresh out the difficulties encountered.

It is not zoning, but the continual change of zoning classifications which has caused most of the trouble in Victoria. Before they invest people have a right to know the range of property uses involved in their choice. It is variation afterwards that jumbles up plans, confuses the public and finally leads to specific grievances. Guarantees do not hold, and land owners or occupiers feel let down.

Yet for the very reason that today it is growing out of all its former bounds Victoria must correlate future development insofar as that can be done. The central need will be a basic plan, publicized and understood by all; a framework of zoning regulations which will work towards fulfillment of that plan directly; and informed public support of the central ideal underlying the whole structure.

Future development of legislative groupings in James Bay, now the most static area in the city, is a pertinent example. There must be some over-all plan, and it will need to be adhered to consciously. Meanwhile it is idle to contend that the province will deal unfairly in that connection while its own direct interests are at stake.

Very Mixed Blessing

WHEN one of the most awkward problems of this vehicular age is how to deal with the ever mounting ratio of highway accidents why boost the maximum speed limit, even on certain road stretches only? Adding another 10 miles-an-hour to the present 50-mile standard is merely an invitation to most drivers to travel even faster than before. This is a move strangely inconsistent with the concern often voiced over current hazards of motoring.

Speed does not account for all traffic accidents but it is at the bottom of most of them. On public highways few motorists stick to the prescribed speeds. If the sign reads 30 the driver steps his speedometer to 35 or 40; if it is 40 the going rate is likely to be nearer 50; when the limit is 50 miles an hour many cars travel at 60 or 70; and so on will be the rule if the maximum limit goes up. The fact that such practice is the result of human itch does not make it either sensible or safe.

What is the need for traveling at a mile-a-minute with official blessing? The present maximum limit is adequate since it is not strictly observed anyway. Raising the limit may make traffic police work less onerous since they may then have fewer offenders to look out for but that should be no criterion. It is fine to build better and smoother roads but if the result is to increase the risk of travel and the likelihood of more accidents this will prove a very mixed blessing. Motorists have to be protected against both themselves and other drivers; putting a premium on excessive speed scarcely seems the way to promote safety measures.

Life Isn't That Bad

A SADDENED socialist confessed in the British Columbia legislature the other day that society may be getting too complicated for its own good. Today, said Mr. Arnold Webster, leader of the CCF opposition, there had to be a reason for everything one did, and that entailed all sorts of formalities. There should be a law to let people do something just for the fun of it.

These are heretical thoughts to be spoken by the leader of the socialist party in this province. The history of every country that has experimented with socialism has been the history not of simplified living but of pyramided rules and regulations, controls and conditions, forms and formulas, quotas and queues; and of the creation of an army of bureaucrats—hundreds and thousands of bureaucrats—to drive people dizzy trying to walk the line.

Certainly society has too many laws and regulations today. Certainly it would be a joy to do something just for fun. But who says we can't? We still don't need a license to breathe the salty tang of the seashore, to grow flowers in a garden, stroll in the quiet woods, or climb a mountain; to play athletic games, ski, or sail a boat.

Mr. Webster should lift his head from his books and pamphlets and look around him. Or is it that there is no fun for a socialist in simple pursuits?

Next Lieutenant-Governor

Choice of Mr. H. R. MacMillan, CBE, D. Sc., as B.C.'s next lieutenant-governor would not surprise us, although the thought might well disturb the distinguished industrialist.

The name of MacMillan has been a household word in B.C. wherever the tang of the fir tree scents the air. Lumbering, as B.C.'s leading industry, would be appropriately recognized by such an appointment. We cannot see why the choice should not prove popular in labor circles also.

Scouting

. . . Those who visit the Scout huts occasionally will obtain a far better idea of the work sponsored by the association which is now seeking financial support. Boys in charge of these leaders are being taught woodcraft and other skills which will assist them greatly in the years to come. They are being taught to appreciate the beauty of the great outdoors and to help save our forests for the benefit of future generations. Even better still, they are being imbued with the value of honor, obedience and the way of life handed down by the founder of Scouting, the late Sir Robert Baden-Powell.

—PARKSVILLE-QUALICUM PROGRESS.

The Liquor Vote

By far the majority of residents of North Saanich don't care the snap of their fingers whether liquor is sold in the area or not. They proved this point by staying away from the polls in exceedingly large numbers last Thursday. . . . It didn't make much difference how the vote went because no new outlets would be opened anyway. The populace in this district is very quiet living and no one in his senses would seek to open cocktail lounges in the area and expect them to be profitable.

Crime Prevention

We ask our readers to pay particular attention to a booklet which is being issued by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Emphasized is a new approach to the problems of crime and criminals.

The RCMP asks that the public co-operate to ensure security, remove temptation and reduce crime, using the old precept of an ounce of prevention being worth a pound of cure.

Brought to our attention, besides the financial aspect of the matter, is the responsibility we should all feel in prevention of crime from a moral standpoint. We hope that none of us will ever feel that through our carelessness someone has been started on a life of crime.

—TWIN CITIES TIMES.

Toasting the Queen

Considering the manner in which toasts to the Queen are drunk at most public dinners and banquets, we feel that this ancient practice should be dropped.

This suggestion is made not out of disloyalty but simply because we think that if the thing can't be done properly it shouldn't be done at all. . . .

It is impossible, at any rate difficult, to do the thing in style and have wine for the toast, so naturally we must make do. But the way the toast is drunk now it would be better to cut out the practice of drinking a toast to Her Majesty altogether.

—COMOX FREE PRESS.

Less Authority

From a strictly local point of view, the new school formula and the new system of municipal grants look good. It puts city residents in the same position that residents of neighboring rural areas have been in for some time—with a lid of sorts on school taxes.

The one feature of the proposals which seems disturbing at this early date is the fact that they make the role of a school trustee even less attractive than it is at present, and it is hard enough now to find candidates for this onerous public job. The proposal that school budgets must be approved in detail by the department of education would chip another piece away from the small amount of local autonomy which school boards now enjoy.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing-wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

IN RECALLING last week the Dumbells of glowing army show memory I said in an aside that maybe a modern variant wouldn't be amiss since almost every other man now is a war veteran and thus a ready-made audience should be lying fallow.

A note however from Jerry Gosley of Smile Show fame says, reluctantly, that the idea is napoo. The audience isn't there. His experience suggests otherwise, and of course he knows his stuff.

Let me quote him a bit, thus:

* * *

"A belly-laugh can still be obtained with a first-war joke when playing to an audience of 1914-18 veterans, but it is a very scattered laugh that greets a topical reference to service life in the last war. The explanation, I think, is simple. The action and majority of men in the first war were with the army in France and nearby countries; their experience and language were common knowledge. For instance, the word 'Madamoiselle' promptly suggests wartime girl friends of that era (always good for a joke).

"In the last war, however, the men were more evenly distributed among the three services and scattered to the ends of the earth. Serving in vastly different conditions in a multitude of countries and climates provided little ground for situations and language common to all. As a small example I know of no single word that generally suggests a female companion of the last war."

* * *

Jerry makes a pertinent point. Actually the first war was much more global than most people seem to remember—I can think of four separate sprightly campaigns far, far removed from France—but it's true that trench life was familiar to most troops and that Canadians especially served on the Western Front.

There was thus a common denominator of experience. This is the glue of all veterans' reunions, and a post-army show is a reunion even though it has intrinsic entertainment value of its own.

Men are gregarious but mainly so because they share the same past history or current interest. That is why there are such things as philatelic societies and Thermopylae clubs.

For the 1939-45 war the denominator was split three ways, initially because the navy and air force each was much more to the fore than formerly, and through the diversity of war locale. There wasn't the same amount of similar happenings. Despite this I should have thought service life in itself, irrespective of branch, would be a suitable denominator for a joke, but apparently not.

* * *

The Korean episode bears Jerry out. When he took his show out there the curtain rolled back to the kind of audience that put the Dumbells over.

About that tour he says:

"There, men shared the same experiences and discomforts, consequently when playing now to returned servicemen from that area roars of laughter greet our references to forces' life in the Far East."

It seems that when the Smile Show travels around the province the players are often told by last war veterans that their performances bring back nostalgic memories of Britain's music halls, but, says Jerry, "I'm afraid that appears to be as near as we can get to reviving memories of the years 1939-45."

Meanwhile his show, always willing to oblige, would stage some well-known Dumbell numbers if only they could lay hands on the words and music.

Trigger-Happy Marksmen

By GEORGE NICHOLSON

RECENTLY a 13-year-old Nanaimo lad was injured in the back by a slug from a .22 rifle; accidentally fired by a chum when the boys were out eagle shooting. Fortunately the accident didn't prove fatal, but the incident has again drawn public attention to the far too prevalent practice of minors carrying firearms. Also to the indiscriminate shooting of harmless birds and animals.

There is already a law on the statutes prohibiting minors from carrying firearms unless in possession of a special license—and then only when accompanied by a responsible grown-up. But parents themselves could avoid a lot of these accidents if they exercised closer supervision over the activities of their children.

Unfortunately the habit of taking "pot shots" along the highways is not confined to the youngsters, but is also indulged in by scores of irresponsible and trigger-happy adults who ought to know better. Road signs, telephone and high-tension wire insulators, windows in vacant buildings and tin cans on roadside garbage dumps are favorite targets.

Apart from causing property damage, these people appear to give little or no thought to where their bullets will land. Human life is therefore endangered and we often hear of cattle being maimed while grazing in the fields. They also frequently try their marksmanship on blinker lights along the coast. This is a very serious offense and could easily result in a shipwreck and loss of life.

* * *

The eagle is one of our largest and most beautiful birds. It is protected in the United States and the pity is that B.C. hasn't a similar law. Years ago, when it was thought that eagles killed fawns and game birds, our game department paid a $1 bounty on them, and along parts of the coast where they were plentiful men made good money shooting them. One man I knew made a leisurely trip around Vancouver Island in his gasboat and turned in 200 pairs of eagles' feet; for which he was paid $200.

And whenever the poultry farmers saw them hovering in the sky, they declared they were after their chickens. But organizations interested in the preservation of our wild life finally convinced the government that these were fallacies and the bounty was dropped. But not until the eagle population had been almost wiped out.

In spite of the fairy tales told our children about eagles carrying off babies and snatching suckling lambs and calves from their mothers, actually they are quite harmless. They might catch a wounded duck or pheasant, but the unfortunate bird would probably die anyway, or later fall prey to a mink or raccoon.

Fish is the eagle's main diet. Herring and cod, which frequently swim near the surface, are their main source of food supply; though they will eat crabs, clams and anything else they can find along the shore.

In the fall they may be seen eating salmon on the river bars, but only those fish which are dying or already dead after spawning. Two of them will sometimes "team-up" and catch a duck; but only fishy ones that live on the sea and are spurned by hunters.

* * *

The innocent owl, whose sight is so poor in the daytime that a person can almost walk up to one sitting on a post, is another bird which these same thoughtless "marksmen" cannot refrain from taking a shot at. Not only are they quite harmless—but in keeping down the rat and mouse population (their chief diet), the owl also is one of Canada's most useful birds. The annual production of wheat and other grains on the prairies would be cut in half if it wasn't for the owls.

Every few years when the lemmings mysteriously disappear, the snow owls come down from the Arctic and sometimes make off with a few domestic chickens; but as this happens seldom it is hardly fair to blame the whole owl family for the loss of an occasional hen. These huge birds are by far the largest of the species and when they come this far south are also favorite targets for trigger-happy people carrying firearms.

Whether hawks should be shot on sight has always been a controversial point—except in the case of our beautiful osprey, which is the largest of the hawk family, lives entirely on fish, and, by common agreement should be protected.

As all types of hawks (except the osprey) kill chickens as well as game and song birds of every kind, farmers and sportsmen shoot them on sight. Arguments in their favor are many and varied—mostly depending on where one resides. The people of the Interior like them because they are deadly rattlesnake killers. The prairie farmer likes them because they keep down destructive gophers, and as they help keep the orchards free of fruit-destroying birds the fruit growers want them left alone.

Then along comes the ornithologist with arguments to prove that to maintain the proper balance of nature no wild birds should be destroyed and that everyone has its rightful place in our wildlife domain—with the possible exception of the starling and the crow—both of which are neither useful nor ornamental and even the ardent bird lover would require a considerable stretch of imagination to think up anything in their favor.

The above arguments all have their points. But whether or not, youngsters should not be permitted to roam the countryside when carying lethal weapons; nor young or old be allowed to take pot shots at objects along the highways, or at seagulls, helldivers, domestic cats or anything that presents a target regardless of where they are.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

AN OFFICE building which I frequently have to enter is growing a little out of date. It has reached the stage that it seems always to need paint, and there is a frowsy sort of newsstand in its lobby. It has three elevators, only two of which are normally running.

The elevator operators are middle-aged men, maybe a trifle worse than middle-aged. Sometimes they are in full uniform which is grey with tired silver braid around the lapel edges. Sometimes they are in half uniform; and at other times they turn up in any old clothes.

And they are the worst-tempered old coots you ever met.

"Come on, come on!" they will snarl at the passengers to hurry them aboard.

They slam the doors in your face just as you are stretching out to enter. Their answers to enquiries from passengers are in grunts and mutters. They never look at anyone. Something else is always on their minds. They engage in hostile badinage with the newsstand girl and with the rowdy office boys who are always congregated in the lobby drinking cokes.

They are surly, insolent, impolite and full of growls.

The general manger of the company that owns the building, and occupies two floors of it, is an old acquaintance of mine.

"It's time," I said to him the other day when I just about had my nose clipped off by rudely slammed elevator gates, "it's time you fired or pensioned off those two rheumatic old airdales you've got running your elevators."

"Who?" cried my friend, astonished. "You mean Herbie and Joe?"

"I never felt attracted to learning their names," I admitted. "But they're impossible."

"Why," expostulated my friend, "they're characters!"

"Characters, is it?" I reflected.

And I reflected further on the thought that a great many ill-mannered, grumpy, crotchety people, both sexes, get away with murder among their familiars by being promoted to characters.

Humanizing the U-Boat

THE world powers were still trying to make rules for the humane conduct of war. At the five-nation naval conference in London, 25 years ago, an Anglo-American attempt to outlaw the submarine was thwarted by the opposition of France and Japan.

However, the powers agreed that submarine warfare would be conducted more politely next time. (It wasn't.) And a limit was to be placed on the number of submarines built. (The limit was later forgotten.)

A ponderous report on state health insurance was tabled in the B.C. legislature by a royal commission. The commission found that the people wanted health insurance, and it could be brought in. Cost of the inquiry to date was $5,740.77.

The B.C. government was winding up its department of industries. The department had set up 11 successful industries with government loans. Other provincially-financed industries had failed. The department was $300,000 in the red—but Col. D. B. Martyn, commissioner of industries, assured the public accounts committee of the legislature that when all the bills were in the treasury would get $100,000 more than it had advanced.

Baseball was coming to Victoria, 50 years ago.

"A four-club league, with Victoria, Vancouver, Bellingham and Everett, is being formed," The Colonist reported. "W. H. Lucas, president of the Northwestern League, composed of the above mentioned clubs, and John J. McCloskey (Honest John), who is to organize and manage the Victoria team—the team that will win the pennant, says McCloskey—arrived from the Sound yesterday to forward the work of organization here."

Street car lines were to be extended. "The Colonist is in a position to make the pleasing official announcement that the B.C. Electric Railway Company will commence almost immediately the extension of their lines to the Gorge on Victoria Arm."

Vancouver Island had no proper school system, The Daily British Colonist complained, 95 years ago.

There was a Colonial School—but nobody knew whether it belonged to the colony, or to the "Colonial School and Church Society," an arm of the Church of England. Well, perhaps someone knew, but The Colonist professed ignorance of the matter.

There was no responsible body to administer the school. "The school does not meet the needs of the place. It is not sufficiently central. The principal's salary is discreditably small. The tuition fee is a burlesque on good education. The accommodations and surroundings are . . . unsuitable."

The colony needed free common schools, The Colonist declared.

Discovery Model

I should like to add my very earnest wishes that the suggestion of Captain Gregory as outlined to the Thermopylae Club will be carried out.

The full size model placed in one of our parks, but preferably by our parliament buildings (as I think it would be safer there) would be a welcome addition for the visitors to our city. The hull could be well treated with a preservative which would keep it over many years. I believe 90 per cent of the people today enjoy the beauty of the old time sailing ships. Really there is nothing on earth so beautiful as a fine ship under canvas.

Alas, as Masefield says, "Earth will not see such ships as these again," so I would heartily endorse this proposal, which will, I am sure enhance the beauty of our city and contribute to the knowledge and pleasure of both our own people and all others who visit our fair city.

School Patrols

I was showing a visitor from Saskatoon around Victoria a few days ago. He saw the new post office, the museum, the parliament buildings, Beacon Hill Park and many other places of interest, but when near the school at Beacon Hill Park he saw something that really interested him. It was the school patrol directing traffic as the school was coming out. He had never seen the boys work before. He saw intelligence, efficiency and courtesy as the boys operated. We managed to get a photograph which he has taken to Saskatoon and will send to England and Australia also.

I explained that these boys were trained by the Victoria police and had the full co-operation of all traffic officers, Mounted Police and courts. This is something that Victoria can be pleased about. The saving of life is being taught to these young people at an age when it will not be forgotten.

A PADRE IN PRINT

BY REV. WILLIAM HILLS

Cardinal Leger, speaking recently in his See City of Montreal, made a very cogent observation, which, I think, should receive the attention of every citizen—Roman Catholic or otherwise.

"Modern man," said the Cardinal, "has become the pensioner and ward of the state."

This eminent churchman had in mind, of course, the pattern of society as it obtains in the modern totalitarian state. But he was also pointing his finger in the direction of the modern democracy.

"In this way," he declared, "life is transformed into an immense bureaucracy before becoming the oppressor which has already crushed the liberty of man in totalitarian countries."

Many others, apart from the Cardinal, have watched with some apprehension the growing paternalism of government. They have seen more and more of those areas of life which formerly depended upon the initiative and responsibility of the individual invaded by a political portfolio.

Take, for example, the case of the Englishman who could not keep his modern water closet because authority said he must use one with a chain!

Observers are frightened lest they who pay the piper will assert their right to call the tune!

Last year, when the Archbishop of Canterbury was in Victoria, he told us that the welfare state had come to stay.

No one, except the most diehard reactionary, will dispute those words.

So long as the people have the vote, there will be no turning back to the days of rugged and irresponsible individualism.

But, if we want to save our essential freedoms, the citizens themselves must draw the line across which governments are forbidden to pass.

This will mean self-discipline—for political parties ride into power by promising the voter everything he thinks he hasn't got but should have.

"Let the government do it" is the cry which robs man of his moral responsibility at the same time as it takes more tax dollars out of his pocket.

Thus the citizen is impoverished on two counts.

* * *

Nowhere is this more clearly demonstrated than in the modern attitude toward charitable appeals. It comes as no great surprise to me that sweepstakes are advanced as a legitimate source of charity!

The corroding acid of impersonality has well-nigh destroyed the personal act of grace which is both the duty and the reward of the Christian citizen.

The disastrous thing about our Community Chest campaigns is not that they fail to meet their objective, for no man ought to be forced to give that which he would withold in matters of this kind.

It is the fact that an impersonal system of bookkeeping which "painlessly" deducts the charitable pledge from a man's payroll insulates him from any personal interest in his so-called "charities."

The same psychological effect is achieved by the multiplication of sales taxes under the title of "Social Security Tax."

Consequently, there is the need for a re-affirmation of the truth that both the individualism of man and the dignity of man are of the essence in a Christian society.

Let us resist any further pressure to turn our good deeds into a government superviced or a bureacratically distributed dole.

Biggest Show Slated

The biggest show of the year at Greater Victoria Arts Centre will open Tuesday with an exhibition of a group of landscapes by the world-famous "Group of Seven" Canadian painters.

Curator Colin Graham states that 45 pictures will be hung during the two-week show.

It is expected more than 1,000 Greater Victoria school children will view the exhibition as a result of conducted tours organized by the women's committee to the Arts Centre.

The pictures are of scenes from coast to coast. Mr. Graham added.

The "Group of Seven," who reached their peak in the 1920s, included Tom Thomson, A. Y. Jackson, Lawren Harris, Arthur Lismer, J. E. H. Macdonald, Edwin Holgate and F. H. Varley.

Patent Pills May Relieve That Burning Feeling

(This column is presented by The Daily Colonist in co-operation with the B.C. Medical Association. The author in each case is an authority on the field discussed, although professional ethics dictate that he remain anonymous.)

At any party or gathering where the topic of conversation turns to who is sick with what and why, someone is certain to mention the burning feeling in his or her stomach. Equally certain, someone else will come forth with a patent remedy to relieve the same.

Fortunately, or sometimes unfortunately, the remedy described by the friend does, in some measure, relieve the symptoms.

What one person may call burning another may refer to as growling, or another may call an acid feeling. One may use the term to describe a real deep-seated pain, another to describe the feeling in his or her throat caused by regurgitation of stomach contents, while another may use it to describe some skin irritation.

The causes of these vague symptoms may be many and varied. It is a common belief that many symptoms are caused by hyperacidity, which means too much acid in the stomach.

Many proprietary medicines are advertised on their labels, in the press, and over the radio to relieve complaints due to hyperacidity. It is normal for a stomach to secrete hydrochloric acid in considerable quantity—it acts as an important digestive juice. In a normal stomach this acid gives rise to no symptoms.

The situation is different, however, if there is inflammation or ulcer in the stomach, aesophagus, or duodenum (the aesophagus is the tube leading from the mouth to the stomach; the duodenum is the first part of the bowel). In the presence of inflammation the acid acts on the abnormal area causing pain, burning or some other symptom.

In addition to disease in the aesophagus, stomach, or duodenum symptoms may originate in the back, the gall bladder, the pancreas or in the large bowel. Dietary and drinking indiscretions may give rise to symptoms. One of the commonest causes of a burning sensation is nervous tension, in which case there may be no associated real disease in the stomach or its adjacent organs.

The presence of burning as a symptom is attested to by the many thousands of dollars spent in advertising patent remedies to relieve it. Pharmacists will tell you that a good proportion of their proprietory and prescription business has to do with medicines for the relief of stomach complaints.

It is often asked—Should one treat oneself when plagued by this unpleasant trouble? The answer is—It depends entirely on its cause. If you are certain that it is merely "hangover" burning following a party, you are justified in taking some proprietory medicine to relieve it; in fact regardless of the cause, if you get relief from soda or some patent pills, take them.

The danger lies in continuing to take them. Too much alkali, which is the basis of most of these remedies, may change your blood reaction and cause other symptoms; or you may be covering up and masking some disease process in your stomach or elsewhere that needs attention.

The next problem is—What should you, yourself, do about that burning feeling in your stomach? There is only one answer to this—Find out the cause and have appropriate treatment.

It may be found, after investigation by your doctor, to be a very unimportant and minor disturbance; but on the other hand it may be the red light that points the finger toward trouble. This trouble could be an ulcer or a cancer in the stomach or in some adjacent organ.

When people come out to British Columbia from the Prairie for example, there is always the difference in the weather to fall back on.

A great number of people become tired for a very special reason. These are to a greater or lesser extent perfectionists. They like things done well. Their homes have to be spic and span and their gardens likewise. When the old man comes in after work and throws his dirty overalls on the back of the chair, hard thoughts, if not hard words, ensue. It might be better sometimes if they did "get it off their chests to clear the air," (the English language did not acquire that phrase for nothing!).

At this point one sees the real problem—it wouldn't be too bad if they had to keep just themselves on the straight and narrow, but they are hurt when their associates don't do the same. This circle tends to get larger and larger until indeed, like Atlas, they are holding the whole world on their shoulders.

Now, these people are the salt of the earth, they are responsible for most of our progress. Is it any wonder though that somewhere along the road they begin to tire!

In those whom distress is not due to specific disease but to one or a combination of factors, just mentioned, the most important thing a doctor can do is to check them over thoroughly and reassure them that their bodies are in good physical shape and that there is nothing, for example like cancer gnawing at their vitals and dragging them down.

A famous physician once said that the best prescription at this point was a straightforward discussion of the problem at hand to point the way to some measure of rearrangement of the routine of living. This should include—for different people, in different proportions—the four major components of life—work, worship, friendship and play.

The Lord's Prayer to Volga Boatman Covered in Doukhobor Choir Program

The Lord's Prayer, the Volga Boatman and 26 other songs will be presented by the Orthodox Doukhobor choir here February 21 as part of a goodwill tour of Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland.

The 33 singers, 16 men and 17 women under direction of John Verigin, will sing hymns during much of the first part of the program, which will begin at 8.15 p.m. at Oak Bay Junior high school.

However, one selection deals with the story of Doukhobors convoyed in chains to Siberia for refusal of military service.

Romantic and folk songs make up much of the second half of the recital, during which several of the singers take solos.

SONGS DESCRIBED

The program describes some of the songs this way:

The Birch Tree Song: "An unusual light-hearted tune of mixed up subjects."

Love Beyond Reason (sung by the women): "I have given you all my love and all I got from you was scorn."

Little Bird: "The plight of the little bird is a sad one. Constantly under danger from the larger birds of prey, it hardly knows where to turn to build its nest. 'Were I to find a haven for me and my companions, then I would have something to sing about unto the end.'"

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Two children were burned to death in a fire which leveled their four-room frame home while their mother was across the street making a phone call. Four firemen had to restrain the mother, Mrs. Theola Cheatham, 21, from running into the flaming house.

Hearty Greetings

Think, Dad—What's Due?

BY R. O. MARRION

For the juvenile philanderer, there's a Valentine bargain on the market this year—35 cards in a cellophane bag, guaranteed to set 35 little feminine hearts aflutter.

There are also kits of make-them-yourself cards for members of the elementary school crowd who are not too tired already of painting and stapling blood-red hearts, excruciatingly pierced with massive arrows. These, however, seem to extend to only eight girl or boy friends per kit.

No such bargains are offered Dad, who won't be looking for them anyway when he suddenly remembers he needs razor blades or hair tonic this afternoon, and goes on his annual pink-faced expedition to find a suitable tribute to his sweet heart.

He'll probably end up with a box of chocolates or a new pair of oven gloves as well as a card.

"Husbands usually want something more practical than just a card," a drug store clerk said yesterday.

Wives, young lovers, aunts, grandchildren and other categories of valentine senders with more forethought than Dad, have had a wide selection of cards to choose from in the past few weeks.

MORE EACH YEAR

More and more people have been sending more valentine cards each year, retailers say. The custom has spread to include relatives as well as sweethearts and, increasingly, just friends and acquaintances.

The trend seems to be toward cards with a comical twist, one retailer said, but there is still a good sale of frilly, sentimental cards.

One type of card that was popular for years but appears to have almost disappeared, is the "humorous" card that has the recipient as the butt of its humor.

The only card of this sort that could be found yesterday in a five-minute elbowing match with two middle-aged women suggested going for a walk and finding a place, "so dark that I can't see your funny face."

Grass Fire Traps Child

ABBOTSFORD, B.C. (CP) — Four-year-old George Gough died Friday in a flaming shed where he sought shelter from a grass fire.

The child had been playing with some other children, apparently lighting matches, when the grass caught fire.

The other children fled down the road away from the fast spreading fire, while George [illegible]

The fire swept into the shed, engulfing it in flames, trapping the child.

Eight Channels Give Victoria Endless Variety

BY ROY PARRETT

Television is Victoria's greatest entertainment medium. An estimated 50,000 viewers sit down to watch it every night.

Besides its wide variety, TV has other advantages. Father doesn't have to dress up, and there's no baby-sitter problem.

Only mother is stuck with the same old surroundings — but she doesn't seem to mind home viewing a bit.

The kiddies, of course, are completely happy as long as cowboys, space adventures and "Disneyland" are the bill of fare.

More than 11,000 Greater Victoria homes now boast television sets.

Nearly 10,000 sets were installed here in 1954 — a record of almost 900 a month.

Five strong channels and three other viewing choices have given Victoria viewers a variety of entertainment enjoyed by few cities anywhere.

* * *

Educational telecasts begin a regular schedule on KCTS, Channel 9, Monday. Transmissions will be directed at elementary schools at 1 p.m. each day, with home shows for children at 5 and adult education programs at 7.

* * *

TV Reader's Digest, on KING-TV at 8, and Medic, on KOMO-TV at 9, are rapidly becoming Monday-night favorites with Victoria viewers.

The medical aspects of an atomic attack on a big city is the Medic story this week. The show is also seen on CBUT at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

* * *

The story of Louis Braille and his great contribution to the blind is told on CBUT's General Motors Theatre Tuesday at 9.30 p.m.

Radio Brings Quick Aid to Fire Victims

BY BRUCE LOWTHER

Effectiveness of private radio stations in an emergency was shown clearly Monday when the two Victoria outlets started a fund which brought almost $1,500 to the George Lloyd family, whose Cordova Bay home was leveled by fire.

CJVI started first, raising most of the money and bringing in donations from such points as Vancouver, Langley

LEN CARLSON

Prairie, Port Angeles and the Pine Island lighthouse in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Both CJVI and CKDA received donations of clothing, bedding, furniture and such items as a stove, washing machine and refrigerator. A new home was also found for the family of five, all within six hours of the fire.

* * *

NO INTERFERENCE

Adjustments by a qualified technician can remedy most cases of interference on television channel 11 by radio station CKDA, which says there is actually no interference at all.

Explanation by Norman Bergquist, chief engineer, is that a second harmonic of CKDA falls in channel 10; in most cases, any trouble can be removed by having a technician adjust the channel sound track.

He adds the department of transport has found CKDA facilities to be "well within limits imposed."

BOB FREELAND

In answer to a man whose loud protest was inadvertently aired by CKDA last week, the station points to a store within two blocks of the studio which has no trouble with TV reception.

* * *

JOLSON-INSPIRED

Like all mimics, CKDA announcer Len Carlson started after watching Al Jolson.

Now the Winnipegger, who took over "Uncle Ed" Farey's programs, has at least seven voices during "Uncle Len's" program at 4.30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

A one-time baseball player, Len also sings with the Continentals at 3.05 p.m. Sundays and holds forth at 1.05 p.m. weekdays on the "Party line," which discusses such vital topics as cures for hiccoughs.

Len and his turntables will move into the main window of the Hudson's Bay Co. store from 2.05 p.m. each day this week to broadcast the "Party Line" on behalf of the B.C. Polio Fund, which sponsors the Mothers' March on Polio next Saturday evening.

* * *

ALDERMAN-ANNOUNCER

Newest addition to the staff of CJVI is veteran announcer Bob Freeland, 39, a former alderman in Saskatoon, whose radio career takes in Chicago, Montreal, Toronto, Calgary, Saskatoon, and CKDA several years ago.

A founders' day program will be featured by the PTA on CJVI at 9.30 a.m. today . . . CBU will begin a series of programs on the works of Canadian composers at 5.30 to-right . . . Rudy Hartman, former CJVI announcer who is production manager at the new CKLG station in North Vancouver, says hopes are for full-power broadcasting this week . . . The "LG" in CKLG stands for Lions Gate; the station is owned by Lions Gate Broadcasting Ltd . . . "The Investigator," a recorded play originally presented by CBC which satirizes Senator McCarthy, was banned by KRGA, Springfield, Ore., because of a protest by the American Legion.

Guild Production Has Stage to Itself

BY PETER BRUTON

Victoria Theatre Guild will go it alone as far as local entertainment is concerned this week but the scene will be back in its good whirl by the following week.

Sole item on the program is the guild's production of "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" which opened at Langham Court Theatre last night.

Briefly, the story deals with a Bond Street physician who suddenly turns to a life of crime. His actions catch up with him in the third act.

Producer Len Lauk describes the play as a mixture of comedy, suspense, and mystery.

One of the big headaches of the production fell to stage manager Ted Wood and his crew. The play has seven acts, each of which has a different set.

BARBARA CUSTANCE

Heading the cast is Don Ross as the doctor-criminal.

Others in featured roles are Stan Wade, Connie Thompson, Elizabeth Knight, Bert Williams, and Jack Rowe.

Curtain time is 8.15 p.m. and the play will be presented through the week, closing on Saturday.

BARE CUPBOARD

Apart from "Dr. Clitterhouse," the cupboard is bare until the appearance of the de Paur Infantry Chorus next Monday.

The chorus, well received in two previous performances here, last year made a tour which broke all existing records in the concert business.

Led by Capt. Leonard de Paur, the group was organized by the U.S. Army in 1942 and has since become one of the most important professional choruses in the world.

CRITICS APPLAUD

New York critics heaped rave notices on young Vancouver pianist Barbara Custance last week, less than a month after she thrilled Victoria audiences.

"Everything she played was warm and alive," said the New York Times. Miss Custance "demonstrated that, when it comes to giving pleasure, musical understanding and poetic concepts can be more important than an infallible memory and a strong technique."

MATINEES DRAW

Elliott Brown, manager of the Odeon Theatre, reports that there was above average atendance at the matinees of "Romeo and Juliet."

Attendance at the evening showings, however, was disappointing. The movie, one of the most beautful ever filmed, closes Monday.

Those who like a real crime picture should see "Black Tuesday," which features Edward G. Robinson at his nastiest since his "Little Ceasar."

Two important art shows are slated for Victoria later this month.

The much-discussed Seagram's art collection of "The Cities of Canada" will be in display at the Crystal Garden February 23 to March 6.

Victoria is represented by a painting showing a corner of the Empress Hotel, the legislative buildings, and the Inner Harbor. It was painted by Walter J. Phillips.

Although residents may query the color combinations in the Victoria painting, the collection is an important contribution to Canadian art.

Also coming up is the Arts Centre's fifth annual exhibition of oil and water painting on Vancouver Island which is scheduled to open March 1.

The exhibition is open to all residents of the Island. Deadline for entries is February 23.

Joy Coghill, a founder and director of Holiday Theatre which is a frequent visitor to Vancouver Island, has been called to Toronto to take part in a CBC television play, "Never, Say No."

JOY COGHILL

The play will be carried over Channel 2, CBUT, March 1 at 9.30 p.m.

Preparing for the Singing Stars of Tomorrow contest is well-known Victoria baritone Stanley Martin who will be heard here in recital March 1.

New Stars Will Grace Artistic Horizon

Music, Drama Festivals Fill Spring Calendar

BY BERT BINNY

Spring is just around the corner and with it will come the various drama and music festivals.

There appears to be a decidedly full program for 1955. At the end of it a galaxy of new stars will appear on the horizon and who can tell to what extent they will add to the

For success in Victoria festivals means other and immediate fields to conquer.

From March 1 to 12 there is the Schools' Drama Festival, an event which, last year, produced first-class entertainment and some really excellent individual performances. Twenty-nine plays, involving some 361 players, were produced.

On March 14 and 15 the Young People's Union of the United Church (Victoria Presbytery) is holding a drama festival. The best play will go to Vancouver for a provincial festival, March 26.

New in the field is the Religious Drama Guild which schedules a festival for April 13.

The guild stems from the Interdenominational Christian Drama—Council of Canada, which has its headquarters in Toronto.

Three plays, including "The Cup of Strength," by Joyce Vernon Drake, are to be produced in Oak Bay under the direction of Mrs. F. D. Mulholland, March 4 and 5. The best of these will compete in the district festival April 13.

MUSIC FESTIVAL

The Greater Victoria Music Festival, March 16 to 25, will include 272 classes, including folk dancing.

Adjudicators include Glyndwr Jones, FRAM (vocal and choral classes); Mrs. Eileen Parker, LTCL (speech arts); L. Sheperd Munn (piano); Miss Nellie Tholen (junior and primary piano), and Walter C. Welke (brass, woodwind and band classes).

The week of April 18 to 25 will see the Southern Vancouver Island Drama Festival.

Old Dilemma Faces Judy: What To Do as Encore?

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Judy Garland is faced with an old show business dilemma: what to do for an encore?

And if one comes up, who's going to back it?

"A Star Is Born" generally is conceded to be the best movie ever written about Hollywood—and Judy gave it a real Oscar performance.

But there are some who say that this perfectionist comes high, too high for money-conscious Hollywood producers. Some studio sources say her behavior during the shooting of "Star" aged Jack L. Warner 10 years and currently is giving the studio accountants an anxiety complex.

Warner Bros. agreed to finance the musical version of the oft-filmed story for Judy and her producer husband, Sid Luft. They set a budget of $500,000 and a time limit of five months.

The picture finally cost $6,000,000 and took almost a year to finish. When David O. Selznick burned down Atlanta for "Gone With the Wind" it was cheaper than Judy's "Born in a Trunk" musical number in "Star."

A $6,000,000 picture usually must make $12,000,000 to break even—the advertising, exploitation and distribution costs double the production cost.

But this one got the greatest exploitation sendoff in recent Hollywood history. An unimpeachable studio source estimated it will take $15,000,000 for "Star" to break even. Few pictures gross that much.

Had "Star" been made within budget, it would be a box smash already. As it is, it may yet make it but the Warner ulcers will have to bleed a little longer.

Why did "Star" cost so much?

Judy admits she's a perfectionist but won't admit to temperament.

She claims a change in screen processes cost a month's delay right at the start.

"You know there was a little thing called Cinemascope that came along just as we started this picture. We scrapped a month's work that was shot in standard size and started over again."

What caused the delay?

Most stories had Judy sulking in her dressing room while hundreds of players and crew stood idly by on the set. This, she denies emphatically."

One possibility for an encore might be the Judy Garland story itself. It has the makings of a better Hollywood script than "Star," complete with every box-office ingredient save cowboys and Indians.

Her "Born in a Trunk" number could be autobiographical, for her vaudeville parents put her in the act at the age of two in Grand Rapids, Minn.

She was in pictures at 13 and never knew a normal childhood. She's 33 now, mother of two lovely children.

Judy's second marriage, to director Vincente Minelli, ended in divorce like her first to composer David Rose. She started dating Luft and they were married.

If ever a couple married with two strikes on them, it was Judy and Luft.

"I know the gossips gave us not a year, not six months—but 15 minutes together at the most," she recalls.

Judy, they said, was washed up. Luft, once married to actress Lynn Bari, had made a few quickie movies but was mostly known for his frequent brawls in Sunset Strip nightspots.

The traveler's cheque has been in use since 1891.

Nothing went right for Victoria Cougars at Memorial Arena last night and as a result, they not only missed a chance for a three-way tie for second place but again have their grip on fourth place in the Western Hockey League threatened.

Knocked off balance in the first minute by an aggressive Vancouver team, the Cougars never regained their equilibrium despite a scrappy comeback try, and took a 4-1 beating from the Canucks.

It was the first time the Canucks had won this season on Victoria ice—they lost the first seven games — and the win moved the Mainlanders within six points of fourth place with a game in hand. And the Cougars this week face a schedule which has them playing here Wednesday, in Calgary Thursday, Edmonton Friday and Saskatoon Saturday.

RACE TIGHTENS

There is some consolation, however, in the fact that the Canucks have to play four games in five days on the Prairies next week and that Calgary and New Westminster have suddenly been projected into the playoff fight.

While they really didn't deserve to win last night, the Cougars didn't merit the loss either. They carried the play much of the time, but they didn't get the bounce of the puck and everything they did went wrong. Passes glanced the wrong way, shots deflected the wrong way and Vancouver goalie Johnny Bower was both good and lucky.

On the other hand, the Canucks were an alert, confident crew which checked well and made the most of what appeared to be a slightly off-color evening for Marcel Pelletier. However, it wouldn't be at all fair to blame the Victoria goalie, although the shots that beat him were all from well out. It was just one of those nights in which nothing worked for the losers.

LIVELY PERIOD

But while it was a night of frustration for the Cougars and their 4,000 or so supporters, the fans got some extra entertainment in the third period when two fights enlivened proceedings.

Don Ashbee, who had a short trial with the Cougars earlier in the season, and Pete Durham were the central figures in the first tussle. Ashbee signed last night with the Canucks to fill in for Phil Maloney, put out of action Friday night when a punch from Edmonton defenseman Larry Zeidel injured an eye, and was credited with an assist on Canucks' second goal and charged with the defeat in the fight with Durham.

It started when Ashbee rode Durham into the boards on a rush into Victoria territory. On the next Vancouver attack, Durham gave the new Canuck a working over on the boards, and then landed all the punches that were thrown when fists started to fly.

BATTLE IN EXIT

Walt Clune, Victoria defenseman, and Vancouver forward Earl Johnson had at it in the second bout late in the period. They were both sent to the dressing room but started to fight again in the runway. Both benches emptied in a hurry but quick action prevented the players from getting off the ice at the exit and forestalled a free-for-all.

In addition, Mark Marquess, the hard-luck guy of the injury-riddled Cougars, almost lost an ear when cross-checked by—you guessed it—Harry Dick. Sixteen stitches were needed to make repairs, but the plucky Marquess was back in action after the sewing.

Canucks started with a rush and had a goal after 50 seconds when Jackie McLeod, the more-than-adequate replacement for Bill Ezinicki, caught a top corner. Dick made it 2-0 less than nine minutes later when he followed up on a play and blasted a long one past Pelletier.

Cougars seemed to be coming back in the later stages of the period but were again rocked in the first minute of the second period when defenseman Gordie Hudson, who packs a wicked slap shot, drove a screened shot into the nets from just inside the blue line. Cougars never repeated less than three minutes later and Cougar hopes went out the window, although the Islanders, led by Colin Kilburn, gave Bower more than a few anxious moments. But they only managed to avert a shutout, Doug Macauley getting goal No. 20 when he swatted in a loose puck while flat on the ice.

Stampeders, Royals In Shaky Positions

Calgary Stampeders and New Westminster Royals, all but conceded playoff spots a couple of weeks ago, now find themselves in a four-way scramble for the three berths behind Edmonton Flyers, Western Hockey League leaders.

Both Victoria Cougars and Vancouver Canucks, who had been battling it out by themselves for fourth place, have gained ground in the past two weeks and both Royals and Stamps are threatened with the possibility of fifth place.

Both Royals and Stamps were beaten last night, the former taking a 6-2 thumping from the Flyers while the improved Quakers bested Stamps, 3-1, at Saskatoon.

RIGHT BEHIND

Results left Stamps and Royals tied in second place with 57 points, two points more than Victoria and just eight points more than the Canucks, who have two games in hand on Calgary and one on New Westminster. Cougars have played one game less than Stamps.

And to make matters more interesting, Royals have lost six of their last nine games while the Stamps have a winless streak of seven games—three ties and four defeats.

A crowd of 4,000 New Westminster fans saw the Royals take the lead twice only to flop in the third period as Flyers rammed in four goals to break a 2-2 tie.

Bronco Horvath, league-leading scorer who gets his points in bunches, led the Edmonton attack. He set up Flyers' first two goals, then scored their third and fourth to break the tie. His goals were his 38th and 39th and the four-point performance boosted his point total to 81, which is 12 more than runner-up Doc Couture and practically assures the Edmonton centre the scoring title.

At Saskatoon, about 3,000 fans saw the resurgent Quakers run their undefeated streak through a fifth game with a handy win over the slumping Calgarians.

Stamps had a first-period edge but found goalie Rev Bentley in top form. The Quakers had the play in the second period and scored twice. Close checking held down the rallying Stamps in the third period until Gerry Couture broke through for his 29th goal at 11.15.

Quakers hung on until the last minute when coach Doug Bentley made it certain with a shot into an open net. Mid Houghton and Ray Manson scored the other Saskatoon goals with Manson assisting twice and Eldie Kobussen also figuring on all three goals with three assists.

Victory left the Quakers still 14 points from fourth place with only 14 games left on their schedule, an almost impossible situation as far as playoff hopes are concerned. The Quakers would need a minimum of 24 points to rate a chance and might not make it even if they won all remaining games.

Stone, Ryalls Tied Up In B.C. Curling Final

KAMLOOPS (Special)—Reg Stone of Trail, perrenial challenger for British Columbia curling honors, and Milt Ryalls of Nelson were battling it out early Sunday morning to decide which rink will represent the province in the Macdonald Brier playdowns at Regina next month.

Stone, who lost to Frank Avery, 11-10, after an extra end, in his first game of the British Consols finals and then won his next six to force a playoff with Avery for the "B" section finalist, evened the score with the Vancouver skip in the extra game.

Avery and Stone went down to the last rock in a bitter battle with the Trail skip making a perfect draw to the button past two guard rocks to win 9-8.

FRACTION OFF

The score was 3-3 after five ends, 7-7 after nine ends and then Avery missed his chance. Playing last rock, he needed only to get Stone's last rock to count five. He was a fraction of an inch off and nudged Stone's rock into shot position for the Trail skip to count one.

Avery tied it up in the 11th end and the 12th was blanked. On the extra end, Avery built up a sound house and got two guards in front of shot rock but he couldn't stop Stone, who made his difficult draw.

That put Stone into the final against Ryalls, who won "A" section of the 16-rink final with seven straight wins. Stone ended the winning streak at once by taking the first game of the best-of-three decider, 12-7. It was 9-7 for Stone after nine ends but Ryalls weakened and Stone got two in the 10th and one in the 11th end.

STILL IN RUNNING

Ryalls stayed in the running in the second game with a thrilling 11-10 win, counting two rocks on the last end to force a third game. It started at 11.45 p.m., Saturday.

Meanwhile play in the Kamloops bonspiel came to an end with two Victoria rinks getting into the prizes. Max Zabel reached the eights of "F" event by defeating Strickland of Prince George, 9-6, then ousted Tony Gutoski, Victoria's Consols finalist, in a quarter-final match, 12-8. Zabel was eliminated in the semi-finals by Kelowna's four Brownlee brothers, 8-7, but won third prize when the Brownlees went on to win the final.

Glen Walkey reached the prize class Friday in "C" section but lost out to Dealy of the Bralorne Curling Club, 8-6, in the semi-finals. Trailing 7-6 coming home, the Victoria skip could have won by taking out Dealy's shot rock, but missed.

ZABEL OUT

Zabel was eliminated from "F" event by Hubbs of Kamloops, 8-4, and Gutoski, who came close to getting into the Consols finals, lost out in bonspiel events before getting into the semi-finals. He trimmed Pyler of Kamloops in one game Saturday but lost to Zabel and Ray Ottem's Consols rinks in other games.

The three Victoria rinks, however, made a fine over-all showing. Gutoski, including his Consols play, compiled a 13-6 record. Zabel won nine of 14 games and Walkey seven of 12 for a combined 29-16 showing.

Nanaimo's Bill Karjala, Vancouver Island's other Consols entry, lost Saturday to Len Evans of Smithers, another Consols entry, to bow out of bonspiel events.

Philadelphia Phillies have announced the signing of outfielder Harry "Peanuts" Lowry, recently released by St. Louis Cardinals.

Terry Tobacco Athlete of Year

VANCOUVER (CP)—Terry Tobacco, 18, of Cumberland, was named B.C. athlete of the year here Saturday night by a jury of 11 leading sport followers in the province.

Announcement of the honor was made during the second annual B.C. Athlete of the Year banquet sponsored by the Vancouver Sun.

Tobacco, brilliant sprinter who placed third in the 440-yard dash during the British Empire Games here last summer, won out over 10 other prominent B.C. athletes selected by sports fans throughout the province.

Underdog Hotelmen Dump Clippers, 5-3

Saturday night score: Drake Hotel 5 at Nanaimo 3.

Next games, Monday: C & C Taxi vs. Drake Hotel, 7.30 p.m.; Nanaimo vs. Navy, 8 p.m., Memorial Arena.

Drake Hotel, destined to wind up in the cellar position when the Vancouver Island Amateur Hockey League finishes its league schedule with a Fan Appreciation Night program at Memorial Arena Monday, pulled the upset of the season by dumping Nanaimo Clippers, 5-3, at Nanaimo last night.

Clippers, with their second successive league championship already stowed away, meet the Drakes at Nanaimo again next Saturday in the opening game of a best-of-three semi-final playoff series.

C & C Taxi, which could slip from second to third place, if defeated by Drakes in the opening game at 7.30 Monday, and if Navy is able to hand the Clippers another setback in the second clash, will start the other semi-final series against the Sailors at Memorial Arena Friday.

More than 50 prizes will be given away by the league to fans attending tomorrow night's games. Top award will be a 1955 21-inch television set, and other prizes include a lady's suitcase, an automobile tire, a $10 cheque, $10 scrip, sweater, table lamp, golf balls, hams, sport shirt, traveling clock, wall clock and return air tickets to Seattle for two. The total value of prizes is approximately $1,000.

Art Green paced the Hostlers' attack at Nanaimo last night with a pair of goals and an assist, but it was Don Hamilton who earned the plaudits of the slim crowd for his great display in the Drake nets.

With his defensemen seemingly more intent on offense than defense, Hamilton faced a barrage of rubber as he sparkled in turning aside 52 of 55 shots directed at his nets during the loosely-played contest. Nanaimo's Walt Davis stopped 24 of 29 Drake Hotel shots.

Norm Kowalyk, Jack Milburn and Ken Gill each scored once for the Hotelmen, while Mel Gordeau boosted his league-leading scoring total to 11 points over team-mate Joe Zuback with two of Nanaimo's tallies. Bud Dumont scored the other Clipper goal.

Getting Better

VANCOUVER (CP)—Dr. W. R. Brewster, club physician for the Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League, said yesterday that centre Phil Maloney is "improving . . . but suffering shock, contusions, and a bad cut over the eye."

Maloney was injured Friday night when Larry Zeidel of Edmonton Flyers struck him in the eye. Both were in the penalty box at the time, and Maloney was looking the other way.

George Lunn Rink Tops Duncan Spiel

DUNCAN — George Lunn's Nanaimo rink won the C. C. Wright Grand Challenge Trophy at the Cowichan Curling Club Saturday night by defeating a Duncan rink skipped by Ollie Panzer, 7-6, in 12 ends as play wound up in four events at the annual Duncan bonspiel.

A total of 32 rinks competed for prizes in the three-day 'spiel, including four rinks from Victoria and rinks from Port Alberni, Nanaimo, Chemainus, Nipawin and Seattle. The winners of each of the four events will play off today for the Grand Aggregate championship.

Lunn gained the finals by downing Ed Price of Port Alberni while Panzer defeated Gordie Robertson's Victoria rink in the semi-finals.

In the Wadsworth Trophy event, a rink skipped by George Sheets of Bellvue, Wash., took top honors by nosing out Frank Burden of Victoria, 10-9, in a thrilling final. Sheets defeated Ed Berkey of Duncan and Burden downed Wilson of Nanaimo in semi-final draws.

K. Dewar's Chemainus rink won the Cushanaugh-Riverside Trophy by trimming Frank Middlemiss of Duncan, 14-7, in a game that was abandoned after 10 ends. Middlemiss reached the finals with a victory over Harry Spottiswood of Port Alberni while Dewar defeated Strandberg of Duncan in his semi-final match.

Harry Hodge of Duncan squeezed out an 11-10 victory over Tony Folk of Duncan in the Cowichan Curling Club Trophy final to bring the host club its only title. Hodge got past Glen Harper's rink in the semi-finals.

Tactics Unpopular But They Worked

BALDWIN, Kan. (AP)—A basketball player stood motionless with the ball for a full five minutes in Baker's game with the College of Emporia Tuesday night.

Charley Dehlinger, College of Emporia star, started the weird shenanigan by stalling on the end line after his team got a two-point, 35-33, lead in the first minute of the second half. Baker players tried to tie him up or get the ball. They succeeded only in fouling Dehlinger. He sank the two free throws and as soon as his team got the ball he moved again to the end line.

Baker ignored him but the crowd didn't. They booed and stormed for five minutes until Baker went after the ball. They fouled Dehlinger again and he sank another pair of free throws. When C of E got possession, Dehlinger crawled into his shell again and waited.

That was practically the only offense C of E used in the second half but it worked. They won, 65-55, as Dehlinger dropped in 19 free throws. C of E made 16 field goals but only four came in the second half.

San Antonio Stakes Won By Long Shot

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP)—Leaving the heavily-backed Determine and Poona II to trail in dismal defeat, Joe W. Brown's Gigantic, a long shot, came up in the stretch to win the $60,000 San Antonio handicap at Santa Anita Park yesterday.

Jockey Roy Lumm, scoring his second stakes victory on long-priced horses for the afternoon, led the rushing parade to the wire with the overlooked four-year-old Challedon colt, for one of the biggest surprises in the 17 editions of the San Antonio.

Imbros, stablemate of Determine, managed to grab second, while Rex Ellsworth's Correspondent finished third in the field of 14 horses.

Gigantic returned $35.50 for a $2 win ticket, $22.90 to place and $11.30 to show. Imbros paid $2.80 and $2.40, and Correspondent, another surprise, $14.60 for the show.

The time for the mile and one-eighth was 1.48 2-5.

Boxer Regrets Opponent Shot

MEXICO CITY (UP)—Raul "The Mouse" Macias, U.S. and Mexican bantamweight champion, could only say "What bad luck, son! What bad luck!" last night when he learned European bantam titleholder Mario d'Agata was wounded in Italy yesterday, ending plans for a title bout between them.

Recovering from his initial surprise, Macias said, "I hope they get well soon, both he and his mama," who also was shot by Sicilian laundryman Giovanni Pettita.

SPORTS REVUE

By Jimmy Cannon

NEW YORK (NANA)—In the age of television Madison Square Garden has become a tomb of sports. Generally the galleries are dark and empty places. They are closed off during numerous events and the desolation in this place assumes the atmosphere of a warehouse when partly filled. The great occurrences seem to be over even as they are being performed. All happenings of sport have a quality of insignificance when they are not accompanied by the sounds of a crowd.

All the main events seem to be preliminaries. It is as if the multitude had not yet arrived or had seen what they had come for and had drifted out. The premises then appear to be populated only by those who must watch the time-killers on all athletic bills.

But the Millrose Games last Saturday brought the old excitement back to this big building. The place was filled. The mezzanines and the high ledges were occupied by people who acted as though they understood what they saw and could explain why it happened. There was little of the tourists' gasping wonderment, such as the burbling of ladies' day housewives at a ball game when a foul curls back into the screen.

* * *

Of course, most of them there were there for the mile race and to inspect Wes Santee, who had been widely publicized after breaking the indoor record for the mile in Boston the previous week end.

They were pleased and astonished and also disgusted by what happened. It is not my intention to reprimand Santee because he is only 22 and I've seen older men surrender to spite under similar circumstances. But this should educate him in the protocol of losing. It might give him grace and the control public men must have if they intend to achieve success at any form of competition.

* * *

It seemed to me, after chatting with him casually the night before the race, that he accepted himself as a winner. Only the time, I concluded, was the mystery going into the race. At Toots Shor's, at the next table to him, I was with Yogi Berra, the Yankee catcher, and Herman Hickman, the old Yale football coach, and they spoke to Santee with that deference athletes reserve for the special of their kind.

He became, in the short while he was in the city, a figure in town. There was in his manner the acceptance of this distinction. It wasn't ugly, either, but a young man's disciplined enjoyment of adulation. What was had happened during the last lap of the mile run Gunnar Nielsen won by putting into the guides a new indoor record of four minutes and 3.6 seconds.

The race assumed the pattern that had been predicted. Dedicated to the others in the race, Dick Ollen established a pace that he knew must burn him down but force another to set a record. Behind him, holding himself in a bunchy posture, came Santee, a man of small-boned frailness, thin in a way that causes mothers to encourage gluttony.

Nielsen's complexion is normally ruddy. But his face seemed sallow, clenched with exertion, as he ran. He wears his hair long and it looked to be a disordered long-stranded wig. The people there were not interested in Fred Dwyer. He was only a shadow cast by Nielsen and Santee, an alien out of place amid greatness, because the race was supposed to be between these two. The others there, like stage properties, only occupied space.

* * *

They were about 80 yards out when Nielsen turned it on. It was clear, as he started to approach Santee, that he was the winner. He moved with a cruel strength and passed Santee. As he went by, Santee veered out to make his passage difficult. It was then that Dwyer tried to go inside. They shoved with their elbows and Dwyer was forced off the track and ran choppily on the infield.

This interference in no way assisted Nielsen. The race was over when he passed Santee. But the poison of failure polluted Santee as they ran into the straightaway. Dwyer pushed ahead of him. Santee reached out and grabbed his shoulder, as a commuter might try to stop another for friendly reasons as they chased a train.

It wasn't a mean act, but a pathetic one. It appeared that Santee couldn't tolerate two men beating him. After that, Dwyer shrugged off the restraining arm and then turned and grabbed Santee around the waist. They staggered across the line, their form demolished by the wrestling, and Santee fell. It was announced that Dwyer had been disqualified and Santee was declared the second man.

* * *

They will run the mile again and do it many times together. But I had the feeling that Santee lost more than that race Saturday night. His pride went and his image of himself, and the disbelief robbed him of his dignity. If Santee ever again beats Nielsen, he will need these corrupted qualities as much as he does his legs.

Holscher Has Lead After 57-Foot Putt

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A 57-foot putt gave Bob Holscher of Santa Monica, Calif., the lead in the $10,000 Tucson Open Golf Tournament at the end of the third round Saturday.

The long putt netted him an eagle three on the 500-yard ninth hole and permitted him to finish the 6,049-yard par 70 El Rio Golf and Country Club course with a 66. He now stands 10 under par with 200 for 54 holes.

Tommy Bolt of Houston, Tex., is a scant stroke behind with 201. Warm weather has loosened the Texan's sore shoulder and he is now rated one of the most dangerous men in the field. Yesterday he had a 65. Yet, according to him, "I didn't play too good." Bolt won the event when it was last played two years ago.

WORST ROUND

Bob Rosburg of San Francisco blamed his slipping to third place with a 202 on "just about the worst round I've played in 10 years." Even so, he was one under par with 69.

Fred Wampler of Indianapolis, Ind., is playing steady, unspectacular golf and has fourth place all to himself with a 69 yesterday and a 203 total.

The tournament was played under ideal weather conditions with the temperature in the 76s.

Holscher, 24, wore a broad grin when a six-foot putt fell on the 18th to clinch the lead.

"I didn't think I'd hit it hard enough," he said. "It barely fell. I played real good. The only shot you could call lucky was the long putt on the ninth."

Holscher played cool golf in front of a big gallery.

There were no signs of temper as Bolt methodically knocked off four birdies in a row starting on the ninth. Two over-par holes were more than offset by seven birdies.

"I didn't play nearly as well as Friday when I had a 67," Bolt said. "If I putted then like I did today I would have had a very low score."

Gene Littler of Palm Springs, Calif., the leading money winner to date, has been unable to fathom the flat and easy course here. He had not equalled par in his three rounds, 71-72-72 for 216.

The winter golf tour moves into San Antonio Monday for the 28th annual Texas Open Golf Tournament.

Exports Lagging, Butler Warns U.K.

LIVERPOOL (Reuters)—Britain's exports have not been rising quickly enough to keep pace with her imports, Richard Butler, chancellor of the exchequer, warned yesterday.

He told a Chamber of Commerce meeting here: "We want our economy to expand as fast as possible, but not faster than our capacity to pay the bigger import bill that our home expansion presents to us."

Hefty Steelhead Lure Anglers

Dozens of Victoria steelhead fishermen will be tramping the banks of Vancouver Island rivers this morning hoping to tangle with something that will match these three beauties brought back from the Cowichan River yesterday morning by Art Deveson, right, and George Barr. The scrappy steelies all fell for a "Mike Heal hairy egg cluster" used by Deveson, the two largest tipping the scales at 13 pounds and the third weighing in at seven pounds.

Heaneys, JBAA Gain in Cup Play At Expense of Butlers, Tillicums

Heaneys and JBAA advanced in Jackson Cup soccer competition yesterday afternoon, the Bays gaining the third round by downing Tillicums, 3-1, at Royal Athletic Park, and Heaneys moving ahead on the strength of a 2-0 triumph over Butler Brothers, in a first-round replay at Beacon Hill.

Victoria West, which received a bye into the second round, will make its first start in defense of the cup in the only match scheduled today, meeting Wood Motors at Heywood Avenue at 2 p.m. Woods ousted Duncan Native Sons in the first round.

Held to a 2-2 deadlock through two overtime periods by the hustling Butlers in their first meeting, Heaneys were clearly the better club yesterday. Better passing and positional play earned them many opportunities and a 2-0 lead at the intermission, but the veterans still had several anxious moments in overcoming Butlers' youthful energy.

GOALIES ON TOES

Netminder George Murphy earned his shutout with an alert performance and Doug Patterson, who had no chance on the two shots that got by him at the other end, again turned in a fine game although his efforts were abetted by luck on a few occasions.

Right-winger Stan Wiseman, the game's standout performer, three times hit the crossbar or post with Patterson beaten, and narrowly missed on half of a dozen other drives.

Wiseman opened the scoring after 31 minutes, tapping the ball into the right corner on a cross from the left side. He made the play for a second counter at 43 minutes, as he cut in from his wing and shot the ball across the goal mouth where Mel Sellars hustled it into the rigging.

Arnie Ferguson, who combined cleverly with Wiseman from his centre-forward position in the opening half and was a steady defender after moving to fullback after a breather, was a big help to the winners, while bustling George Robbins appeared the pick of Butlers.

HAT TRICK BY WHITE

Tom White did all the damage for JBAA at Athletic Park, rapping in three second-half counters as the Bays dominated play in the final session after being held on even terms during the scoreless opening half.

He finished off a neat passing play with Fuzz Blair, Dave Patterson and Ian Holroyd to deflect the leather into the netting for his first goal at three minutes and counted his second on a similiar play four minutes later.

Tillicums made it close at 2-1 at 10 minutes but Patterson made it safe as he completed his hat trick with 10 minutes remaining.

Wing Halves Gary Pynn and Lisle Scott played strong games for the winners, who were faster on the ball throughout than the youthful Tillicums.

Oak Bay Establishes Slim Lead in Series

Oak Bay Wanderers, holding an 11-0 lead early in the second half, choked a late rally by James Bay and scraped through to an 11-9 victory yesterday at Macdonald Park in the first game of a two-game, total-point series for the city first division rugby championship.

Wanderers, who held a wide edge in play in the first half but almost failed to hold the surging Oarsmen in the second session, will carry a two-point lead into the second game February 26 at Macdonald Park.

Dick Hales opened the scoring for Wanderers at the 20-minute mark when he fell on a loose ball following a penalty kick that was wide of the mark. Stu Smith converted to give the winners a 5-0 half-time lead.

PENALTY, TRY

Keeping up the pressure, the Wanderers counted again when Stu Smith kicked a penalty goal and increased their lead to 11-0 when Rafael Duke dribbled the ball down the sidelines and fell on it for a try.

Then the Oarsmen, who are defending the Barnard Trophy, started to roll. Keith MacDonald put the losers on the scoring sheet with a try, John Skillings booted a penalty goal and Art Manson brought the Oarsmen to within two points when he intercepted a Wanderer pass and went 10 yards for a score.

James Bay's second division team went on its biggest scoring rampage of the season when it whipped Oak Bay Wanderers, 42-5, at Windsor Park. In the other second division match, HMCS Venture, newcomers to the league, scored their first win after a defeat and two ties by stopping Victoria College, 8-0, at the College grounds.

SCORES 24

Ray Ramsay of JBAA was the star of the piece at Windsor Park, scoring four tries, three converts and two penalty goals to account for 24 points. John Whan scored two tries, his second effort coming on an 80-yard run, and Jack Sims, Wayne Henderson, Dode French and Mel Davison got one try each.

Christianson got Oak Bay's only try midway through the first half and Dickenson converted.

The Venture cadets and Vikings battled through a scoreless first half but Keith Stirling exploded for two tries, one of them converted by John Rowland, in the second half.

SHAWNIGAN LOSES

St. George's School of Vancouver pinned an 8-3 defeat on Shawnigan Lake Boys' School in a well-played and hard-fought exhibition match at lower Macdonald Park. Thor Young scored a try and Pete Tynan converted in the first half while Slick got Shawnigan's only try early in the second session. Young clinched the victory by drop-kicking a field goal.

In other games played between the two schools at Vancouver, the Shawnigan Lake "seconds" took a 17-3 decision while the Colts battled to a 3-3 deadlock.

Two midget division games were postponed yesterday.

Last night's scores: Detroit 2 at Toronto; Boston 5 at New York 5.

Next games: Montreal at New York, Toronto at Boston, Detroit at Chicago.

Goalie Glenn Hall, up from Edmonton Flyers of the Western Hockey League, and centre "Dutch" Reibel, an Edmonton standout two seasons ago, combined to lead the Detroit Red Wings to a 2-1 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs last night.

Hall, replacing regular netminder Terry Sawchuk for three games, came up with a brilliant display while Reibel fired the winning goal at 7.22 of the third period to move the Red Wings to within three points of the National Hockey League leading Montreal Canadiens, who were idle.

STILL HOPING

In the other game played last night, New York Rangers fired two unanswered goals in the third period to salvage a 5-5 tie at Boston and keep alive their slim hopes for a playoff berth. The Rangers trail the Bruins by 14 points with each club having 16 games remaining.

A crowd of 12,980 at Maple Leaf Gardens saw one of the liveliest games of the season with referee Bill Chadwick calling 14 penalties and also having a tough time keeping Tony Leswick, 31-year-old Detroit left winger, in check.

Reibel broke up the game by ramming a pass from defenseman Red Kelly past goalie Harry Lumley. Glen Skov tallied the other Detroit goal at 13.01 of the second period while Eric Nesterenko scored the lone Toronto marker at 12.38 of the second.

REFUSES TO GO

Leswick, had words with Chadwick midway through the final period and was given a 10-minute misconduct. But he refused to leave the ice and threatened the referee as Detroit players and the two linesmen attempted to get him into the penalty box. Chadwick eventually ordered him from the game and it took nearly a minute to guide the irate Leswick to the exit door while the fans booed.

At Boston, the Rangers held a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period but the Bruins bounced back and carried a 5-3 lead going into the final frame. The Rangers worked desperately in the third period and their efforts paid off when Ron Murphy fired a goal at 14.24 and Don Raleigh tied it up at 16.52 with his second goal of the night.

The Rangers had Bill Ezinicki, former Toronto and New York forward, in action and he picked up one assist. Ezinicki was purchased by the Rangers from Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League.

Eagles, Scots Draw, Stay Tied for Lead

Canadian Scottish and Eagles failed to break their first-place deadlock in the Lower Island Junior and Juvenile Football Association's division IV yesterday by battling to a scoreless draw at Beacon Hill Park.

Eagles are unbeaten in seven half-play while the Scots extended their undefeated streak through 11 games. Scots' Dave Dawson, and Gordie McBride of Eagles, the opposing centre-halfs, both turned in sparkling efforts in the 60 minutes of scoreless play.

Combines moved into third place in division IV, winning by default from Sidney, which failed to put in an appearance on its home grounds.

Eagles took a four-point lead in division III by scoring three goals in the second-half for a 3-1 victory over Canadian Scottish. After a scoreless first-half, Dave Benson, Jim Galbraith and Glen Robbins Jr., counted for the winners, while Gary Booth scored for the Scots.

In division V action, Joe Stebeck and Ron Elphick scored goals as Combines stretched their lead to four points over Eagles with a 2-0 victory.

Collegians Split Wins

Victoria College broke even in two exhibition games with Cowichan High School at Duncan Friday night, the men's team scoring a 55-33 victory over the up-Island squad but the women's quintet bowing to Cowichan, 47-15.

Victoria College was never headed in the men's contest, leading 18-4 at the end of the first quarter and 30-11 at half-time. Cowichan outscored the visitors by 13 points in the second half but found the deficit too big to overcome.

Bill Oldham and Gary Corbett topped the winners with 20 and 18 points.

In the women's game, Ann Snowsell picked up nine of College's 15 points.

Kins Whip Mainlanders

VANCOUVER (CP) — Victoria Senior "A" Kins women beat Kitsilano Senior "B" women 52-33 in a basketball game here Saturday night. Shirley Lewis led the visitors with 10 points. Shirley Gordon paced the Kitsilano team with 12.

English, Irish Tie

DUBLIN (Reuters)—England and Ireland tied 6-6 in a Rugby Union international match Saturday.

Ohio State officials have ordered Robin Freeman, one of the nation's top scorers, to quit basketball for the season because his fierce desire to reach the top had driven him to the point where he couldn't sleep and study.

Sunderland Beaten, Wolves Seize Lead

LONDON (Reuters) — Charlton Athletic handed Sunderland its first home defeat of the season and knocked it out of the English League first division soccer leadership Saturday by scoring a 2-1 upset decision.

Wolverhampton Wanderers, the defending first division champions who for the past few months have been waging a see-saw battle with Sunderland for the top spot, took advantage of this slip to climb back into first place.

BACK FROM DISASTER

Last week, the Wanderers suffered their worst reverse in 21 years when routed 6-1 at Bolton, but they swept back into winning form Saturday with a 6-4 victory over Huddersfield. Wanderers now have 36 points—one more than Sunderland—and each team has 13 games remaining.

A remarkable goal in the second minute put Charlton on the path to the victory which carried it into third spot with 34 points and a game in hand over the leaders. One of the most improved teams in the country, Charlton took the lead when fullback Jim Campbell, standing at mid-field mark, lobbed the ball goalward with the wind behind him. Sunderland goalie J. Fraser came out too far and the ball sailed over his head into the net.

Manchester City, also with 34 points, confirmed its recent Football Association Cup victory over Manchester United in decisive style with a 5-0 triumph over United.

FIRMLY AT BOTTOM

Luckless Sheffield Wednesday, without a home victory since last October, is now firmly entrenched at the bottom of the table following a 3-1 defeat at the hands of Portsmouth.

Luton Town and Blackburn Rovers are still locked in a struggle at the head of Division Two. Luton beat Rotherham 4-0 at home and Blackburn won 2-0 away against lowly Plymouth, which left each with 38 points. Luton has a better goal average.

In Division Three South, Leyton Orient retained its two-point lead over Bristol City, drawing 2-2 with Gillingham while Bristol City was tied 2-2 by Brentford.

Accrington, beaten 3-1 at Wrexham, had its Northern section lead cut to one point, as rival Scunthorpe won 2-0 at home against Mansfield.

In Scotland, Aberdeen increased its Division "A" lead to six points with a 4-0 home win over Partick.

Moomaw May Rejoin Argos

TORONTO (CP) — Don Moomaw, University of California football star who gave up the game to study for the ministry in 1953, may return to Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four this season.

"Moomaw told me recently that he is interested in coming up here this year," team director Harry Sonshine said.

Moomaw played six games with Argonauts in 1953 and left the team to begin studies leading to the baptist ministry at Princeton theological seminary.

TV NOTEBOOK

By Keith Dillabaugh

This week we would like to pass on a few quieting words for the benefit of black-and-white TV owners who seem to be flirting with the thought that their conventional sets are momentarily about to become obsolete.

Despite all the hullabaloo about color, the fact remains that there are probably no more than ten thousand color sets in the hands of the public as compared to some 31 million black-and-whites. Boiled down to a simple dollars and cents basis, this means that neither the networks nor the sponsors can afford to cold-shoulder the whopping pile of loot represented by this vast audience.

It would appear to us that until a 19- or 21-inch color set can be offered to the buying and viewing public for, say, 500 skins or less, the chance of your black-and-white set joining the ranks of the dodo bird and celluloid collars isn't worth fretting over.

And mechanical trouble isn't worth fretting over either . . . as long as DELTA ELECTRIC is around. Our EXPERT REPAIR DEPARTMENT will have your TV set performing like new in no time . . . just call 4-7416 and we'll come a'runnin'. ***

VICTORIA'S ANNUAL RAINFALL OF 27 INCHES IS SLIGHTLY LOWER THAN THE NATIONAL AVERAGE AND FAR LESS THAN SOME OF THE RAINY SPOTS IN THE WORLD. RIGHT ON VANCOUVER ISLAND AT HENDERSON LAKE, ONLY 100 MILES FROM VICTORIA THE ANNUAL RAINFALL IS 236 INCHES, THE HIGHEST IN NORTH AMERICA. HIGHEST IN CONTINENTAL U.S. IS AT GLENORA OREGON WHERE THE AVERAGE IS 132 INCHES PER YEAR. A NUMBER OF DISTRICTS IN THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS HAVE AN AVERAGE OF OVER 300 INCHES PER YEAR. MOUNT WAIALEALE ON THE ISLAND OF OAHU RECORDS AN ANNUAL AVERAGE FALL OF 476 INCHES. OUR RECENT RAINSTORM WHICH ADDED NEARLY THREE INCHES TO THE ANNUAL FALL COVERED THE GREATER VICTORIA AREA WITH OVER FIVE MILLION TONS OF WATER.

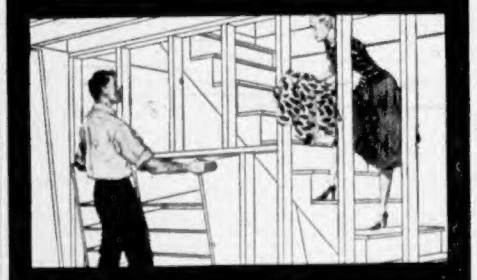
SYLVAPLY
DOUGLAS FIR PLYWOOD

How the family grows! Converting your attic to sleeping quarters for the youngsters can help to solve your space problems; it's a worthwhile project that can add greatly to the value of your home when you use real wood panels of plain or decorative Sylvaply. Because the big sheets of Sylvaply cover 32 square feet of wall, ceiling, or floor, at a time, you can do a quicker job with fewer joins.

Built-ins, cupboards, and other home improvement projects like this cost less to build with easy-to-finish, self-framing Sylvaply in 5 or 7 ply thicknesses. Sylvaply saws as clean as other woods with power saw or hand saw, nails close to the edge without splitting. And the system of simple glued and nailed butt joints possible with Sylvaply does away with tricky joinery details.



There are just dozens of spots around a house that can be quickly turned into useful storage space with Sylvaply. Because Sylvaply is an engineered wood panel, you can do home improvement projects easily and at low cost. Easy to saw and nail, easy to finish Sylvaply requires only simple carpentry for cupboards or built-ins like the handy under-basement-stairs storage cabinet shown above.

In addition to regular 4 feet by 8 feet panels, you can now buy handy sizes for those small jobs and repairs . . . Makes "doing-it yourself" easier than ever. "Take Home" panels are available at your lumber dealers in sizes from 12 by 36 inches up. Carry them home or slip them in your car trunk.

Experimental Notes

Sawdust Use Boosts Yield

In May, 1948, a large sawdust [illegible] was established in a commercial planting in the Okanagan district. This was the first experiment with sawdust [illegible]

[illegible] at a depth of [illegible] inches was used. During the seven seasons since this [illegible] of fruit were obtained from plants in the same planting under clean cultivation.

Yield of fruit was increased 3,079 pounds an acre annually for the entire period (1948-54) through the use of sawdust.

At a [illegible] price of [illegible] a pound for fruit, the increased yield means an [illegible] in gross revenue of $[illegible] an acre a year. An estimated cost of $[illegible] an acre for sawdust and a labor cost of approximately $[illegible] an acre for spreading. [illegible] sawdust was added during the period.

Apparently the benefits of sawdust arise mainly through conservation of moisture. [illegible] other experiments have been undertaken with sawdust designed to study its influence on fruit tree [illegible] in the Okanagan Valley.

Results obtained will be released from time to time.

Purebred Pup Usually Safer Bet

BY B. ROBERT MAGGS

[illegible] to [illegible] as to the idea [illegible] a purebred pup instead of a [illegible]. There are [illegible] sides to the question. I have heard people expounding the "vastly superior" intelligence of the mongrel and vice versa. But in all sincerity I would say that the advantage of getting a purebred pup is that his family tree [illegible] and he may be expected to grow up with the looks and characteristics of his breed.

[illegible] from two purebred dogs will also combine the attributes of their parents in a fairly predictable fashion. A mongrel [illegible] may be fair, short [illegible] the [illegible] question. But in a combination [illegible] is usually impossible to predict.

Please do [illegible] that [illegible] have [illegible] of the [illegible] of them [illegible] believe that the price you pay or the yard and a half of pedigree paper you may get with your dog will guarantee that he or she will always be a good watchdog, companion, or sweet tempered.

Combined Effort

Real Estate Men Meet on Monday To Launch Multiple Listing Plan

Thirty-one member firms of the Victoria Real Estate Board will band together Monday to offer a photo-multiple listing service, considered the fastest, most effective way known of selling real estate.

Under the new Multiple Listing Bureau, sellers and purchasers of property will have benefit of the combined efforts of 183 real estate salesmen and agents.

But they only have to deal with one agent.

The owner lists his property with the real estate agent of his choice who becomes the listing broker, through whom all appointments are made, offers tendered, negotiations conducted and advertising placed.

Prospective purchasers deal with a purchasing agent of their choice who arranges all appointments with the listing brokers to see the property and discuss others.

BOTH SIDES

As a result of this, both sides are ably represented a vendor by the listing broker who becomes his agent, and the purchaser by the selling broker.

The Multiple Listing Bureau is a new additional service by members of the Real Estate Board of Victoria which by a simultaneous listing with 31 real estate brokers offers the widest possible market for property.

But an owner may still list his property for sale exclusively with one agent or list it with a few agents of his own choosing.

However, if he chooses either of these methods, he does not qualify for the blanket services of the 31 members of the Multiple Listing Bureau.

THREE SYSTEMS

Nevertheless, it must be stressed that a property owner, when approaching his agent now has an opportunity to list his property under three systems multiple listing, exclusive listing, and open general listing with one or more agents.

A novel feature of the multiple listing plan is that all properties are photographed within 24 hours after the listing is placed with a member firm.

Within 48 hours all 138 salesmen and agents have in their possession photographs of the property and complete details of the listing.

Although the vendor deals only with one man he has the services of a large group of experienced salesmen.

The plan ensures that all prospective customers will be reached within hours of the listing.

PROPER TEST

The multiple listing plan provides the owner with a proper test of his listed price on a wider basis than is possible by a listing given to one firm exclusively or to the few firms he would ordinarily see.

Selling of property by means of the multiple listing system, or alternatively the co-operative listing plan, is not a particularly recent innovation in the field of real estate merchandising, but its efficiency has been realized and the system developed by agents in Canada since 1945.

Multiple listing bureaus in Canada and the United States are now well established and provide an indispensable medium through which real estate sales have been negotiated more efficiently and expeditiously to the advantage of both buyer and seller.

In Canada, the Toronto Real Estate Board pioneered the multiple listing system which has spread so that there are now 17 cities in Canada using the system, and in every instance it has proved a most successful service to the public.

SALES DOUBLED

The Vancouver Real Estate Board Multiple Listing Service was established in January, 1951, and last year handled a $12,000,000 volume of property, more than double the sales of 1952.

It is now forseeable that the volume will reach $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 before too long, says Clifford C. Howells, chairman of the Vancouver service.

It has now been developed to the point where home seekers of every description automatically turn to the multiple listing service for the aid and information they require when establishing a new home for themselves.

The Vancouver bureau passed the million dollar mark for property transferred in one month, in April 1954, and in November of last year the monthly transfer had reached $1,600,000.

EVEN GREATER

The Vancouver board plans more newspaper advertising by both the firms and members' firms to stimulate even greater sales volume.

The Victoria bureau has been largely patterned on the Vancouver system of pooling house and commercial property listings and prospective purchasers to make quicker and better transactions.

Under the multiple listing system, during the first 11 months of 1954, Canadian real estate boards from coast to coast sold $106,500,000 worth of real estate, in addition to the property sold by conventional means.

This figure was ascertained by a recent survey conducted by the Canadian Association of Real Estate Boards, and represents an increase of $26,000,000 in sales under the multiple listing system over the same period in 1953.

STRONG TENDENCY

The record figure for the first 11 months of 1954 indicates, according to J. A. Weber, of Edmonton, association president, a strong tendency by owners to choose photo-multiple listing method of selling real estate in preference to other methods.

"In line with this trend," he says, "more and more local real estate boards are adopting the photo-multiple listing system, and in consequence even higher sales are anticipated for 1955."

The Real Estate Board of Victoria in the spring of last year appointed a committee to investigate the advisability of providing this service to Victoria property owners and home seekers.

After exhaustive study in Vancouver and many other Canadian cities, this committee, recognizing the great advantages of the system, strongly recommended that it be inaugurated as an additional service of the Real Estate Board of Victoria.

The committee's recommendations were unanimously adopted by the board, and 31 members of the Real Estate Board of Victoria have enrolled and are charter members of this new service which commences operation Monday.

OFFICES OPEN

Central offices of the Multiple Listing Bureau of the Real Estate Board of Victoria have been opened at 113 Exchange Building, on Broad Street.

Secretary to the bureau is Mrs. Catherine Godfrey, who is well versed in matters of legal administration pertaining to real estate.

Charter member firms are: A. Bernard and Co., Ltd.; Fraser Biscoe; Boorman Investment Co., Ltd.; B.C. Land and Investment Agency Ltd.; Brown Bros. Agencies Ltd.; P. R. Brown and Sons Ltd.; F. N. Cabeldu Ltd.; Capital City Realty; Alfred Carmichael and Co., Ltd.; Dickie and Company Realty; Financial Survey Ltd.; Harry Foster Ltd.; Gillespie, Hart and Company Ltd.; Hagar and Swayne Ltd.; Heisterman and Company; H. A. Humber Ltd.; Island Investment Company Ltd.; Johnston and Company Ltd.; Ker and Stephenson Ltd.; Northwestern Securities; Pemberton Holmes Ltd.; Rithet Consolidated Ltd.; Royal Trust Company; Salt Spring Lands Ltd.; A. M. Taylor Spittal and Company Ltd.; Western Homes Ltd.; J. H. Whittome and Company Ltd.; and Yorkshire Corporation Ltd.

First listing under the Multiple Listing Bureau system of Real Estate Board of Victoria is examined by bureau secretary, Mrs. Catherine Godfrey. Multiple listing system goes into operation Monday and for the first time in Victoria offers home-seekers the opportunity to see photographs of all available properties through the office of only one real estate broker.

Cause of Death Declared Natural

NANAIMO — Ernest Hutchings of Nanoose died of natural causes, a coroner's jury ruled at an inquest here Friday. Mr. Hutchings, a logging truck driver, died of a heart attack while working at Northwest Bay, last Monday.

The jury made a strong recommendation that all operators of heavy duty equipment be compelled to take an annual medical checkup.

Japanese Scientists Making Canadian Visit

LONDON (AP) — A group of Japanese scientists who visited British atomic installations last week left here by air for Canada Friday.

Victoria Local To Propose Swing Shift

A resolution from the Victoria local that swing shifts be put into effect in the B.C. lumber industry is expected to be defeated at the District No. 1 convention of the International Woodworkers of America (CIO-CCL) in Vancouver this week.

While the Victoria local will state that swing shifts would give all employees equal working conditions, other locals are expected to point out that the plan will interfere with the seniority system which governs day and night shift work.

New York Office Of TCA Robbed

NEW YORK (CP)—A young gunman escaped with $200 Friday after holding up a clerk in the Trans-Canada Air Lines office on East 58th Street. William Murray, the clerk, said he was alone in the office when the man came in, produced a gun and ordered him to put the money in a paper bag. Murray complied with $200 from the cash drawer.

Equal Awards Sought For War Decorations

Equalization of money awards for decorations won by Canadians in the two world wars is being sought by the Veterans of Franch branch of the Canadian Legion in Victoria.

The branch is making representations to Ottawa to have all awards paid by the Canadian government in Canadian currency, and to have the awards paid for the same decorations whether won in the First World War or Second World War.

The U.K. at present pays the awards for First World War decorations in sterling, at about sixpence a day. The Canadian government pays the awards, at 12½ cents a day, for Second World War decorations.

The awards are paid for the Distinguished Conduct Medal, Conspicuous Gallantry Medal (naval and flying) and Distinguished Flying Medal, and, if won since 1943, the Military Cross, Distinguished Service Medal and Military Medal.

Winners of the Victoria Cross receive $50 annuities and 12½ cents a day.

On the Labor Front

IWA Parley To Hear About 'Automation'

BY BILL MAVOR

Automation, a new word and symbol of automatic or self-acting machinery displacing humans, will be explained to the International Woodworkers of America (CIO-CCL) convention this week in Vancouver.

E. W. Kenney, research and education directors for the IWA, will explain automation as it is now developing in the lumber industry.

In a special Wednesday evening illustrated lecture, open to wives and friends of delegates, Mr. Kenney will give a glimpse of what the lumber industry may be like in 1975, and what general economic and social conditions may be in 1965.

In past discussions, the research director has stated that automation does not necessarily have to scare workers, but if the unions "intelligently meet the problem it can come about orderly."

He has stated that wage structures may require considerable adjustment, that incentive systems, particularly individual forms of piece work will have to be revised or discarded.

He added that training or retraining problems will require more attention than they have at any time since the Second World War.

An across-the-board wage boost in 1955 for IWA's 32,000 B.C. members will be sought in negotiations with lumber and logging operators.

Resolutions of the 18th annual B.C. district convention have not been released but officials said they show a general demand for an overall wage boost in the industry.

It has been indicated the union will not heed management pleas of inability to pay.

Union officials said high profits marked up by some of B.C.'s biggest lumber operators in 1954 led to the union stand.

It is understood that action to clean Communists out of the IWA will be contained in constitutional amendments rather in direct resolutions across the floor.

Robert Milliken, business agent for the Victoria Teamster's Union (AFL-TLC) will press his opinion that a vehicle testing station should operate in Victoria, and that others should be established in this province.

He said yesterday he will present his arguments before a meeting February 25 at Vancouver of the Joint Council of Teamsters.

Mr. Milliken last week won police department support for his opinion that a testing station is needed in the city to help prevent such infractions as lack of signal arms, lack of rear-view mirrors by both truck and car drivers.

He termed some vehicles on city streets "decrepit."

February 28 has been set for a public hearing by the Board of Industrial Relations on proposals to amend the minimum wage order affecting the construction industry. The hearing, at 2 p.m., will be in the Douglas Building.

Victoria building trades are expected to present briefs along with those from employers.

TLC locals meeting this week include painters, pressmen, bricklayers, Monday; boilermakers, electricians, master plasterers, moulders, Tuesday; TLC council, laundry drivers, Wednesday; milk salesmen, sheet metalworkers, Thursday; laborers, electricians, Friday.

CCL locals meeting are IWA, today; Div. 276, CBRE, Thursday. The labor council has been postponed one week.

The Car Corner

Airport Racing Thrilling Spectacle

BY J. T. JONES

Vancouver Island will have its first sports car racing on May 1 a full day's program at Cassidy Airport just this side of Nanaimo.

For the car enthusiast there are few finer spectacles than [illegible] speed up since the war as a substitute for real racing. The Sports Car Club of B.C. has been holding races at Abbotsford's airport for some time and this year is adding the Cassidy event to its calendar.

HAS ADVANTAGES

Airport events have several advantages over real road racing and a few disadvantages.

In the first place they are safer. A car can go completely out of control, get 150 feet off the course and have not even a scratched fender to show for it.

Spectator control is greatly simplified. Almost any kind of course can be laid out on the runways — easy and fast with [illegible] and Victoria being the [illegible]

Biggest boon to the spectators is the view of the whole race, not just a few hundred yards of it as in a road circuit.

According to information received so far, the program will include races for cars with passenger displacement less than [illegible] cubic centimeters: 1,500 to 2,000; 2,000 to 3,000 and 3,000 up, both stock and modified.

Fire, flood and earthquake couldn't keep me away from Cassidy Airport on May 1.

* * *

It may be just deep-dyed skepticism but I can't get very excited over the Autolot anti-[illegible] device a couple of Vancouver men were demonstrating in Victoria during the week.

[illegible] burial weight sliding on a steel shaft and centred by two springs, is supposed to adjust the balance of the car's rear end to add weight to the inside wheel just as a sled skatts.

The principle can be demonstrated with a piece of paper and a penny. Put the penny on the centre line of the paper [illegible] the paper to one side, and the penny stays put, although it is now at one side of the paper.

Some of the theory of the Autolot is obscure even to the promoters. Instead of watching the planned demonstration at the B.C. Electric Co. bus parking lot, I went on a test ride with Karl Metzer, an executive of the company, at the wheel.

At my suggestion he took his 1955 Pontiac convertible up Mount Douglas and then up the far side of Mount Tolmie. The most impressive thing about the climbs was the view from the top.

Mr. Metzer is a skillful driver and he handled the car beautifully, but I think if his heart was in it he could make just about as good a showing in any of the better handling American cars.

Proposed Track Will Preserve Park Setting

Plans of the Island Turf Club for a horse racing track at Beaver Lake are shown above superimposed on an aerial photograph of the area taken by Colonist cameraman Jim Ryan. Project will cost $450,000, not including exhibition buildings. Five-eighth-mile track will be shielded from highway by fence and border of ornamental trees. Covered grandstand will seat 5,000. Ample parking space has been provided and an underpass is planned under the highway leading to a traffic circle to dispense traffic freely. The ground will be preserved as nearly as possible in its natural state and trees will be cut only where necessary to build the track or erect buildings. Company says it is prepared to help create and beautify lakeside parks.

Leader Visits

COMMISSIONER BOOTH

Salvation Army Chief

Easy Money Brings Materialism—Booth

BY IAN MACDONALD

Too much easy money has turned Canadians towards materialism, the country's new Salvation Army leader said last night.

"When people have things too easily they forget God," Commissioner William Wycliffe Booth, grandson of the Army's founder, said during a flying visit to Victoria yesterday.

Appointed last month to command the Canadian and Bermudian divisions, he attended the world conference of Salvation Army leaders in London before being brought up to date on Army affairs in Canada, and a ready officer.

Commissioner Booth appears as though he would be equally capable of commanding an army of bean-scented troops in combat.

He [illegible] strenuous on a brisk [illegible] cause tape British accent.

MANY CORNERS

Commissioner Booth was born in High Barnet, England, where the movement was founded 90 years ago and has served in many corners of the world since he joined the Salvation Army movement in 1915.

His Victoria trip is part of a nation-wide tour to inspect his new command. Commissioner Booth arrived in Victoria by air yesterday afternoon and returned to Vancouver that night. He was accompanied by his wife.

BIGGEST PROBLEM

Canada's biggest problem is the same as that exists the world over.

"It is to persuade people to come to God," said Commissioner Booth.

High on the Army's list will be a program to combat the growth of juvenile delinquency, he said the commissioner.

He expects to see the growth across Canada of villages similar to that recently opened by the Army at London, Ont.

Commissioner Booth says the aim is to have 12 children from broken homes live in each unit under a father and mother.

The children will be of both sexes and varying ages. "The idea of herding boys together and girls together is outdated," he said.

TREMENDOUS NEED

There are many agencies to look after orphans but not so many to handle children from broken homes. "There is a tremendous need for this in Canada," said the commissioner.

He said he had been in Canada only four weeks, too short a time to assess the moral fibre of the nation. "But ask me about France, England and the continent," he said. "Practically every nation on earth is building more prisons."

To End 'Injustices'

Industrial Amputees Seek Pension Changes

A three-man delegation of men who lost limbs in industrial accidents will ask Labor Minister Lyle Wicks to remove "inequalities and injustices" in workmen's compensation payments.

They will try to find out for instance why [illegible] being severed below the knee [illegible] a 5% [illegible] while [illegible] severed [illegible] amount [illegible] $[illegible].

PAYMENTS RAISED

Increases in payments to amputees were made by the [illegible] the Workmen's Compensation Act amended during the last session.

The awards are not satisfactory, spokesmen for the amputees [illegible].

The awards would be acceptable if we had all been put on an equal basis, but the same injustices have been brought in again," said Mr. Lockwood.

He cited the following instances.

Under the old scale one man who lost a leg below the knee received $38 a month. Another with the same disability received $15. Under the new scale the pensions were boosted to $74 and $28 respectively. The gap between them remained as wide.

Under the old scale one man who lost his forearm received $38 a month. Another received $22. The pensions were boosted to $74 and $[illegible] respectively.

EARNINGS AT TIME

The pensions were based on earnings at the time of the accident.

We were led to believe the increases would be based on earnings [illegible] the compensation [illegible] amended during the last session," Mr. Lockwood said. "That would mean that the basic rate irrespective of former earnings was the $2,000 to a maximum of $2,400.

"The actual payments made do not appear to carry out this intention."

Fire Chief Frank Briers thought a carelessly discarded cigarette butt was responsible for the outbreak.

The arena was being used for a public skating session at the time of the blaze.

Conciliation Scheduled For Police

Dispute between the 12-member Esquimalt police department and the municipal police commission over a system of promotions is expected to go to conciliation. The Daily Colonist learned last night.

Negotiations have been stalemated for eight days since policemen asked that their two senior members be given new positions as corporals.

Commission rejected the proposal but suggested that the two men be given a "star" or grade A class which the policemen rejected. Difference between the two suggestions is said to be $6 a month.

The policemen have generally agreed to a commission offer of a wage increase of $5 a month for all grades except probationers. A bonus of $20 a month for overall time became part of regular wages when both sides agreed to amalgamation of the police and fire departments March 1 on a trial basis for the rest of this year.

However, it is understood that policemen will notify the commission now that they have decided to ask for conciliation, which may not fit all previous agreements except amalgamation.

Gay Spring Bonnets Bloom Atop Fur Coats in Montreal

Miss Lavoie, member of the Colonist editorial staff, now on visit to England for a six month stay, stopped in Montreal to write a staff on Lanvin fashions.

MONTREAL — [illegible]

[illegible] women are seen [illegible] ping off from shopping excursions of [illegible] fur coats and [illegible] hats with petite little spring [illegible]

Montreal, generally pointed out for being the style centre of Canada, so new fashions now appearing here can all soon be seen in the West coast.

The hats for spring are the tiny pancake type to be worn squarely on the head. A favorite trimming note is a single rose drooping over the middle of the forehead.

Most unique hat was one embroidered with colorful straw flowers with an impudent black velvet caterpillar crawling up the back.

THE PANCAKE

Novelty purses are getting a big mind-up from Montreal shops.

The ever-popular [illegible] being shown in straw [illegible] and velvet [illegible] coats. One featured the [illegible] trimmed with a trio of pearl [illegible] pearl [illegible] on the outside.

Bags that are definitely different are the straw ones made in fruit shapes—lemons, limes, and green pears—and the ones made of two straw flower pots joined with a length of fish net.

Flower trimmed straws and [illegible] appear [illegible] patent [illegible] are being featured [illegible] with [illegible] models.

[illegible] Montreal [illegible]

But it's being featured in Montreal for this spring with the newest models having a slightly "twenties" look.

The jackets button from neckline to a lowered waistline for a flat, long torso look, much smarter looking than the earlier versions of the boxy suit.

Victoria-based ships of the Second Canadian Minesweeper Squadron, RCN, will be seen in action on channel 2 today.

Three ships, the HMCS Comox, HMCS James Bay and HMCS Fortune will be shown battling 50 mile per hour winds, while on actual minesweeping operations.

Cameraman Paul Johnson spent several days at sea with the squadron, to record the action.

The minesweeping squadron the first to be established on this coast, was formed last year and is commanded by Commander J. V. Steele.

She ships and crews will be seen on local TV screens, via CBUT, on News Magazine at 7 tonight.

★ ★ ★

The Lone Ranger will be seen on KING-TV, in an hour-long "spectacular," this afternoon at 5.

The story of the masked lawman, his horse Silver, and Tonto his faithful Indian companion, will be told, as a salute to the program, which began on radio 22 years ago today.

★ ★ ★

Hall of Fame tells the story of the first schools in Europe, and of an Englishman's long battle against laws which made education unlawful, except for the privileged few, on KOMO-TV at 5

★ ★ ★

Captain Gallant, a true-to-life desert adventure series, filmed with the co-operation of the French Foreign Legion, begins on channel 4, at 5.30. Buster Crabbe stars in the title role, supported by real Legion troops and Arabs.

The Life of John Milton, and the troubles which beset him after Cromwell's rule ended, is tonight's You Are There documentary on KTNT-TV at 6.

You Asked For It, tonight brings a pair of nervy females to channel 5 viewers at 7. One of the daring damsels, Betty Fox, performs on top of a tiny platform on a 125-foot tower. Another Betty, Betty Skelton of the Dodge Motor Company, and the only woman test driver, jockeys a car at top speed over the Detroit proving grounds, on the show.

"Always a clear, sharp picture on a needle-nose TV set."

Toast of the Town features a "Cavalcade of Radio 1920-1955," starring many of radio's well-known personalities on CBUT at 8. If you didn't catch the show on KTNT-TV, be sure to see it tonight on channel 2.

★ ★ ★

Maurice Ravel's satirical opera, "L'Heure Espagnole," will be the CBC-TV presentation on CBUT at 10. The opera pokes fun at operas generally and carries to extremes standard operatic devices. Even the music has some pokes fun at the actors themselves. Tommy Tweed will introduce the work and explain the plot.

★ ★ ★

Two hilarious comedies are scheduled for late viewing. KVOS-TV presents "Topper Returns" at 9.30, and CBUT "I Married a Witch" at 11.

* * *

Kaiser Deal 'Repugnant' To UBC Young Liberals

The Social Credit government's plan for the Kaiser dam project is similar to "repugnant" Social Credit legislation enacted in Alberta during the 1930s, a Victoria Liberal Association meeting was told Friday.

Darrell Anderson of Chilliwack, one of 24 members of the UBC Young Liberals Club who visited the legislature Friday praised the federal decision to block the deal.

Mr. Anderson, was one of five members who took part in a panel discussion of current B.C. problems during the meeting. Victoria speakers were Cecil Brown and Brian Cox.

Byron Johnson, former premier, said of the Kaiser dam plan, "I have never seen any provincial government use such poor judgment."

Speaking from the floor, he urged Liberals to be prepared to answer questions on the right of the federal government to block such legislation.

Bilbao in Spain has long owed its prosperity to large iron ore deposits in the vicinity.

Parley Held By Regiment

First all-Island conference of Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) since artillery units up-Island were taken over by the infantry regiment is under way in Victoria.

Key personnel of the regiment from Courtenay, Port Alberni, Nanaimo, Duncan and Victoria met at Bay Street Armoury yesterday and are continuing their conference today.

Attending are company commanders, seconds-in-command, training officers, cadet officers, sergeants-major and quartermaster sergeants.

Tax Violates Principles, Says Lawyer

VANCOUVER (CP) A Vancouver lawyer said yesterday the new property assessment tax is a violation of the fundamental principles of taxation law and said the tax on machinery was a "penalty" and not a tax.

F. Kay Collins said the section of the municipal act of assessment act on property brought down by the Social Credit government was also contrary to the Canadian constitution, outside the powers of the provincial legislature, and by-passed the requirements of the city charter.

Under the section, a property owner may be assessed for his tenant's machinery.

Mr. Collins said it was possible a landlord's property could be put up for tax sale because a tenant was delinquent in paying taxes.

The court of revision, made up of three aldermen, reserved judgment until Tuesday. Should judgment favor the store operators, the case would probably be taken to court.

The bidding

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST

Pass	2 ♣	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Dbl
All pass

It may seem that North pushed the bidding a little and could have contented himself with a bid of three spades, but ten-twelve points in high cards seemed worth more. It at least put the strong West hand back on South's hand as soon the four spade bid was a not unreasonable gamble.

West opened the ace of clubs. How should South play the rest of his hand to give himself the best chance to make four spades?

From the bidding, it should be obvious that East has little or nothing beyond long spades and since the opening lead all minor honor cards should fall on one ace and five of the outstanding trumps. Declarer's base is going to be the ♠J. Instead of ruffing himself to establish the three outstanding aces and its dependent on the opponents. West is perhaps the more dangerous of the two opponents, because it is West who is the king of trade under West's ace.

Assuming a club diamond shift from West, the point of attack is obvious. Nothing is gained by taking tricks in the South to discard a heart and South then leads a heart toward dummy's queen. West ducks and wins the king and returns the ♡J, just East is in position to ruff the third round again and East can lead one round of trumps, which is dummy. But taking one trick away from trumps is a small price to pay for establishing the diamond suit and to take a ruff in dummy and to have a card in dummy with which to lead to South's ♡A. South is assured of making three tricks with his winning suit of spades.

If declarer fails to drop Southern king of trumps under the ace however West continues a club and South cannot get to dummy in time to give North a heart discard except by ruffing one of North's spade winners. West will then lead a trump trick and South is left to lose a trump trick and tricks in his defense. If North's trump queen is not West's lead, if declarer tried to get out of dummy by leading a diamond East will win with the queen of diamonds and the extra diamond trick will cost declarer the game.

The first days of the new Craigflower schoolhouse, now a century old, are particularly difficult to trace, because there were no newspapers in Victoria until 1858.

"The Rev. E. Cridge examined the school in Scripture, and the master, Mr. Clarke in the other branches — reading, geography, grammar, arithmetic, etc. The examination in geography was particularly good.

"Prizes sent by the governor were given to Miss Jessie McKenzie, William Lidgate, Christina Veitch and Dorothea McKenzie. The girls of the school had also prepared a present of useful needlework for the governor, which, with an address for him, was duly for warded to Hr. Excellency."

It was a great holiday for its time. Lucky enough the school master and his wife and there was also dormitory accommodation for pupils who lived far off — as far as Lakehill and Colwood.

The one big schoolroom had a huge stone fireplace, and there's a story that often, by way of punishment, Mr. Clarke made a pupil stand with his head up the chimney. That, of course, was on warm days, when no heat was needed.

The settlement at Craigflower became really important 100 years ago this month when the new schoolhouse was completed. The school building can be seen at the extreme right of the picture. Left of it is the farmhouse, where Kenneth McKenzie lived, and then the farm buildings.

The next oldest in the west is the first St. Ann's Convent which still stands on Hey wood Avenue. It was built when the first Sisters came here in 1858.

He seems to have accomplished very little here, excepting the writing of his diary which is today a valuable link with the past, and so very important, for it gives a good picture of day-by-day Victoria, before there were any newspapers.

Colonist Writer Offers Tips To Would-Be U.K. Immigrants

HARRY YOUNG

Prospective British immigrants to Canada have received a briefing from Harry Young, business editor of The Daily Colonist, who is vacationing in his native Scotland. Following are excerpts from a recent broadcast Mr. Young made at the invitation of the BBC on the topic, "Going to Canada."

"The facts of the matter are that at the moment Canada does not seem to have a very good rating so far as possible immigration is concerned.

"This is unfortunate, for Canada has probably never been in greater need of maintaining a flow of new citizens from Britain.

"It seems to me that the British people are getting their picture of Canadian life chiefly from those who have emigrated to Canada and who have failed to settle down.

"But for every one who [illegible] there are dozens of young people who [illegible] in Canada just the sort of life and the sort of opportunity for which they have been looking.

Unfortunately for Canada, few people outside their own personal circle of acquaintances hear anything about them. The result is an uneven picture of what Canada is like in the average English or Scottish immigrant.

"The average Canadian employer is not willing to engage a man or woman, unseen and offered at a distance of from 3000 to 6000 miles away.

"Speaking generally, the man who can hold a job satisfactorily in Britain has a pretty good chance of going out to Canada on spec to find a job. That can probably be been [illegible]

"The two main requirements are faith in your own ability and a determination to give Canadian life a fair trial.

"The average craftsman or professional man is more inclined to find a suitable job in the centres of population than out in the wilds. Of course there are still plenty of pioneering jobs for pioneering people and that is where the youngsters come in.

"Canada is a young country for the young man, but that does not mean that there is no place in the scheme of things for the middle-aged immigrant."

Pop Stop Likely; Disagree on Fee

CHEMAINUS—Drinkers of soda pop here and in other parts of the municipality may have to go thirsty for some time unless distributors reach an agreement on trade license fees with municipal authorities.

Four soft drink distributors have canceled deliveries protesting "excessive license fees." The fee was reduced from $60 to $50 in 1953 after an earlier appeal.

"I'LL CRY--- Tomorrow"

By LILLIAN ROTH

With Mike Connolly and Gerold Frank

CHAPTER XV

SO when Burt and I returned to Los Angeles from the Australian-New Zealand tour, Katie was on hand to greet us.

We took a little house in Santa Monica, and Burt found a job with an advertising agency. Things began to look up for me also—I obtained a booking at Ciro's, in Hollywood.

I sent wires to many of the stars I had worked with. I am opening at Ciro's. I have been asking you for a long time and I'd be thrilled if you'd come to my opening.

The big night arrived and a few of the stars were in for me.

Still the critics were lukewarm or complimentary. My salary was high. I brought back greater and greater arrangements, and at a big salary in Vaudeville, the bread-and-butter show business.

THEN—NOTHING

Then nothing happened on the Ciro engagement.

We did the rent, we could make ends meet on Burt's salary. Katie economized. The finances were low when I brought New York my sister Ann first her new baby.

During the next few months with so much time on my hands I read a great deal. I was partly daily impressed by Leonide du Noüy's Human Destiny, and its emphasis upon collaborative work that can achieve glorious objects. My reading encouraged me in the search for a way of life that would meet the needs of the Lillian Roth who had emerged when I had experienced what was had come the end I had come.

I spoke to several Roman Catholic priests every time in some embarrassment, for my motive was not always understood. They tried to be helpful but they were [illegible] busy. "Your case is difficult," [illegible] And the Church looks on [illegible] matters very seriously," one told me.

RESPONSIVE CHORD

Burt's mother wrote me and in one letter she enclosed a gift of two rosaries, blessing the Church of the Blessed Sacrament in Hollywood. One afternoon Burt and I went in to have them blessed.

The priest who performed the ceremony, Father Joseph M. Clee, struck a responsive chord in me. Father Clee's sermon was personal. I'd like to discuss with you, if I may," I told him.

He invited me into his study. He looked at me for a moment, then said surprisingly: "Miss Melodie, was your maiden name Lillian Roth?"

I stared. How would a priest know the name of a nightclub entertainer?

"We received a letter some time ago from Father Richard Murphy in Sydney," he explained. "He thought you'd be among here one of these days."

Eventually Father Mackey told me, "Anyone who has looked so much deserves to have the best of [illegible]. He suggested that I begin instruction in the religion. [illegible] after study [illegible] to enter the Church. Then I'll [illegible] you a [illegible]

MORE FISH FOR FOOD

Talks Hope to Boost Ocean's Yield

By A. I. GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

THE first world conference on fisheries under UN auspices meets in Rome this spring to study how to make the oceans — and inland waters, too—yield more fish for the world's food supply.

A [illegible] per cent of the animal protein consumed by the world comes from the waters, although water has [illegible] per cent of the [illegible] surface.

[illegible] experts now being summoned from all over the world to meet at the Rome headquarters of the UN's Food and Agricultural Organization in April will have as one of their major assignments the job of mapping out ways of increasing the productivity of the waters.

NOT ONLY PROBLEM

But this will not be their only problem. As the accompanying map shows, there are sections of the seas where intense commercial operations are endangering the fish supply. Conservation measures to be discussed at Rome may restore fishing grounds in 140,000,000 square miles of the world's seas now in danger of being fished out.

Conservation rules of some sort might conceivably allow areas already swept but in possible future danger from unregulated operation of radio and [illegible]-equipped fleets which can [illegible] stay up longer to catch more fish than anything known in the past.

Conservation field will be barred from discussion at the Rome meeting: the question of international fishing rights to the fishing grounds themselves. As will be seen, on the map, most fishing areas are adjacent to land areas.

HOW FAR OUT?

In dispute is how far a country can extend its jurisdiction to the waters of its coasts to keep out others. Limits should be 3 or four 12 miles on 200 miles as they vary.

There is a great part of the problem that is not a question of how far can one nation go out in its [illegible] to conserve fish and [illegible] around the countries where [illegible] and catching are [illegible].

The United Nations International Law Commission has been trying for several years to solve these problems. There has been a [illegible] [illegible] and the [illegible] Law of the Sea Conference [illegible] April 24 to May 27 in Geneva.

The United States is one of the top seven in the fish producing world. It has eight fish [illegible] with another [illegible] and six [illegible] on the [illegible] or walk a powerful one.

RUSSIA OPPOSED

The Russians are one of the big seven opposed the conference. They said it should [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

LET'S GO LATIN

'Box Break' Key To Mambo

By ARTHUR MURRAY

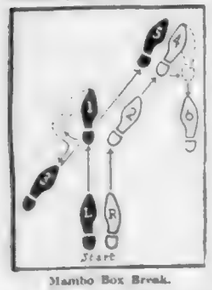
The mambo box break is the main item on today's agenda. Learn how to do it here, with America's top dancing master, Arthur Murray, as your personal instructor.

LESSON III

HOW have you been doing so far? Isn't the Mambo deceptively easy? And isn't it a lot of fun? No wonder we find this enchanting dance enjoying such great popularity wherever you go from coast to coast these days. And we have still more simple—but polished—steps in store for you in these lessons.

Today I'd like to take up the box break with you. This step has two key roles for any mambo enthusiast. First, it's a vital foundation step and secondly, it's a characteristic mambo break, with that quick, decisive rhythm which gives the mambo an enchantment all its own.

Before we take up the actual step-by-step pattern of the box break I want to explain the basic principles which underpin it. The box break begins [illegible] your partner. Where [illegible] you and your partner are facing.



Mambo Box Break.

On the first count, the man releases the girl with his right arm while extending his left arm to hold her—what you might call a martial "throwing her away" motion. On the second count, the partners turn to a side-by-side position, the man's left shoulder close to the girl's right. On the third step, they do a backward break. They swing around to face each other on the second half of the pattern.

As you can see in practice, you start basic your partner upon the position with the "throwing away" movement, then you side by side and finally face to face in conventional pattern.

Here's the man's part for the box break:

And the girl part:

After [illegible] routine by going into the mambo box step which we learned in the first lesson.

* * *

Easy to do: Of course it is. It will take a lot of practice to give the steps the free and easy motions you want but there's no special knack needed. Anyone can learn to do the mambo or any other dance—[illegible] only practice faithfully. Work it out step by step until you have it down solid. Then try it with a partner.

Next Week: An unusual variation of the box break.

When out with a crowd don't dance with only one partner.

ARTHUR MURRAY SAYS:

1—When you're out with a crowd, it's poor taste to dance with only one partner.

2—Girls should say, "I enjoyed that dance"—and not, "Thanks"—when a number ends.

3—Men should not ask permission of a girl's escort when they want to dance with her. She's not copyrighted you know.

4—Girls are being rude when they refuse to dance with one man, then step off with another.

5—Dancing is fun. Show it when you're out!

Cutting Up for the Girls

"A few" little girls are going to be thrilled tomorrow when they receive the results of the Valentine's toil of 11-year-old Byron Wright, 2928 Blackwood. Byron wouldn't say whether "a few" means one or ten. But he blushed a little. (See story on Page 5.)

Britain at Odds with Stand

U.S. Refuses To Appease Reds With Nationalist Island Chain

Little Hope Seen To End Fighting

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has told Britain that it is out of the question to surrender any Nationalist-held coastal islands to the Chinese Communists merely in the hope of inducing the Reds to stop fighting.

Britain has officially advised the United States of its view that all the coastal islands—including the Quemoys and Matsus—belong to Red China, although the Reds should not fight to get them.

Some U.S. officials fear this notification was the beginning of British pressure to get the United States to induce Nationalist China to turn more and more of the islands over to the Reds.

U.S. policy does not, in fact, rule out the possibility some day of a settlement which would let the coastal islands go to the Communists in return for a firm Communist agreement recognizing a non-Communist status for Formosa.

LONG WAY OFF

But any such deal now appears to be a long way in the future and officials said that, so long as the Peiping government continues to assert its intention to capture Formosa, the United States considers Quemoy, the Matsus and perhaps other off-shore islands to be strategically important for Formosa's defense.

Some days ago Premier Chou En-lai of Red China was reported in dispatches from London to have let it be known that while he would not negotiate a formal ceasefire, he would accept one if the Chinese Nationalists would get out of all the coastal islands.

U.S. officials said privately that under this proposal the free world would be "appeasing" Chou while he retained without check his announced designs on Formosa.

Differences between London and Washington over the Quemoy-Matsu island line become potentially more significant now that the evacuation of the Tachen Islands far to the north has been completed.

NEED SOLID FRONT

A new period in the Formosa crisis, concentrated on diplomatic efforts for peace, is opening up and agreement between the United States and Britain—the maintenance of a co-operative if not solid front on major Formosa questions—will prove more important than in the recent past.

LONDON (AP)—The Soviet Union disclosed Saturday it is plugging for a Geneva-type conference on Formosa with the Chinese Reds at the table and the Chinese Nationalists left out in the cold.

Moscow radio announced that foreign minister V. M. Molotov had proposed that Britain and India join in trying to persuade the United States to agree to a 10-nation meeting either in Shanghai or New Delhi later this month.

In Washington, informed officials said Britain and the United States have decided such a conference without Nationalist China would be unproductive and have rejected the proposal.

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — The U.S. 7th Fleet returned to Formosa Sunday with the evacuated Tachen garrison but even before it arrived the Nationalists reported armed Communist junks massing near Matsu—an island the nationalists hope the fleet will defend.

Talks Avert Strike Action By CBC Men

OTTAWA (CP)—A strike of CBC radio and television technicians was averted late Saturday when negotiators reached a basis of settlement in the contract dispute.

A joint announcement by the CBC and the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians (CIO-CCL) said the tentative agreement is subject to ratification by the CBC and the union's 775 members in the corporation.

Details of the agreement were not disclosed.

The announcement was made at the labor department headquarters by Andre Lapointe, CBC industrial relations chief, and Timothy J. O'Sullivan, the union's international representative in Canada.

The two officials headed negotiation teams which conferred for several hours during the day in the presence of labor department conciliators.

After the joint statement was issued, a CBC spokesman said there remain a few details to be ironed out but that this is expected to be done today or Monday.

NO STATEMENTS

Pending negotiation of the remaining details, representatives of the CBC and the union have agreed to make no further statements concerning what will be in the contract.

The often-adjourned negotiations between the two disputants resumed after top officials of both sides met separately with labor department officers.

The strike could have crippled CBC radio and TV broadcasting, but the CBC stated it had made plans to carry on with a reorganized and part-time service.

The union claimed—and the CBC denied — that it had obtained a copy of the corporation's plan for continuing operations during a strike.

O'Sullivan said the plan involved a deal with another union for strike-breaking.

The fate of two other crew members is still not known.

Conservative parliamentarians will welcome him at a dinner Wednesday night.

Antigua Next Stop For Royal Tourist

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (Reuters)—Some 12,000 children staged a rally for Princess Margaret before her departure from Barbados on the next stage of her West Indies tour.

After inspecting the rally at Garrison Savannah, near St. Ann's Fort, and hearing the children sing, she was to go to Bridgetown's Trafalgar Square to review a farewell guard of honor mounted by the Barbados Regiment.

Soon afterwards, the Royal yacht Britannia was to set out on the 300-mile voyage to Antigua, next port of call on Margaret's month-long tour.

Friday the princess went swimming for the second consecutive day at the private beach owned by Ronald Tree, former British Conservative Member of Parliament for Market Harborough. She is a childhood friend of Tree's sons, Michael and Jeremy.

She also attended the Barbados trade and industry fair in Queen's Park, and clapped when a band played a special number entitled "All Hail the Royal Princess." It was composed in her honor by V. A. Southwell, a local school teacher.

Southern New Brunswick Hit By Driving, Rain-Lashed Gale

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—A rain-lashed gale raked southern News Brunswick with winds gusting to 90 miles an hour Saturday, leaving scenes reminiscent of Hurricane Edna's ravages last September.

The storm formed suddenly over the New England states and moved across the border with little warning, tearing down hydro wires and disrupting communications.

Thirty head of cattle had to be destroyed when a barn collapsed before the battering winds at nearby Lancaster. Near Moncton, a 50-foot brick chimney crashed atop a glass greenhouse and winds ripped a porch roof from a house and planted it high in a tree.

Power failures were general throughout southern New Brunswick and almost half the telephone lines from Saint John were down. Police roped off the downtown plant of the New Brunswick Power Commission when winds snapped lines leading from the building.

HIGHWAY FLOODED

A foot of water flooded the Moncton Highway near here and high seas on the Bay of Fundy kept the Digby, N.S., ferry Princess Helene tied up at her pier.

Live wires fell across a factory in Moncton, starting five minor fires and causing $500 damage.

Nova Scotia was caught in the fringe of the storm, but winds gusted to 65 miles an hour at Shearwater naval air station, near Halifax.

The 16,000-ton Greek liner Nea Hellas manoeuvred about the harbor for three hours before pilots could tie her up.

Chrysler Local Votes To Strike

Defends Film Stars

One of Hollywood's best-known citizens is a man who has never appeared on a movie screen. He is Jerry Giesler, the fabulous attorney whose chief job is keeping film personalities out of jail. A three-part series on Giesler's career, in which he has defended stars from Valentino to Marilyn Monroe, begins today on Page 3.

Old Friends May Meet

LONDON (AP) — Marshal Georgi Zhukov, new Russian defense minister, would like to visit his wartime friend, President Eisenhower, when relations between their nations improve, Moscow radio said Saturday night.

Return Of Tots Asked

NELSON, B.C. (CP)—A delegation of about 30 Sons of Freedom Doukhobors called on Emmet W. Gulley, secretary of the local co-ordinating committee on Doukhobors, here Saturday and asked his assistance in having their children returned.

More than 70 Freedomite children are wards of the department of welfare at New Denver where they are schooled and cared for in a converted sanitarium.

The children were taken into custody when their parents were jailed or refused to send them to public school.

Mr. Gulley advised the Freedomites, mostly women, to avail themselves of the legal processes provided.

De Gaullists Spurn Pflimlin

PARIS (UP)—The powerful right-wing followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle refused last night to join the proposed government of Premier-Designate Pierre Pflimlin, greatly reducing his chances of winning National Assembly approval next week.

However, the 48-year-old Pflimlin still may succeed in forming a cabinet to replace the government of Pierre Mendes-France ousted by the assembly last Saturday.

Movieland Nominates Top Choices for Annual Oscar Awards

GRACE KELLY

AUDREY HEPBURN

DOROTHY DANDRIDGE

JUDY GARLAND

MARLON BRANDO

BING CROSBY

HUMPHREY BOGART

JAMES MASON

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Judy Garland, Grace Kelly, Jane Wyman, Audrey Hepburn and Dorothy Dandridge were nominated last night for the annual "Oscar" award as "Best Actress of 1954."

The workers of movieland also named their five choices for best actor, best motion picture and "best" of everything else that goes into making screen plays.

Nominated for the "Best Actor" award, to be handed out with the other "Oscars" by the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences March 30, were:

Marlon Brando, the tough dockworker of "On the Waterfront"; Bing Crosby, the has-been singer who loses himself in alcohol in "The Country Girl"; Humphrey Bogart, the tyrannical "Captain Queeg" of "The Caine Mutiny"; Dan O'Herlihy, who played the title role in "Robinson Crusoe," and James Mason, the alcoholic actor who commits suicide in "A Star Is Born."

Miss Wyman played the doctor's wife in "Magnificent Obsession," the 1954 version of the best-seller of the 1930s. Miss Kelly attempted to save Crosby in "The Country Girl." Miss Garland was the unknown girl who rose to stardom in "A Star Is Born," and Miss Hepburn was the chauffeur's daughter in love with her father's employer in "Sabrina."

Miss Dandridge, the first Negro nominated for a "Best Actress" award, played the cigarette girl in "Carmen Jones."

The five best movies were:

"Caine Mutiny," from the best-seller and stage play about a mutiny aboard a U.S. destroyer escort vessel;

"On the Waterfront," the tough story of labor racketeering on the docks;

"Country Girls," from Clifford Odet's story of the alcoholic singer who is a has-been;

"Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," a backwoods musical;

"Three Coins in the Fountain," the story of three girls in Italy seeking romance.

Five film beauties were nominated for best supporting actress of last year. They were Jan Sterling, Eva Marie Saint, Claire Trevor, Nina Foch and Katy Jurado.

"On the Waterfront" walked off with three of the five nominations for the "Best Supporting Actor" role by placing Lee Cobb, Karl Malden and Rod Steiger on the ballot for the finals. The other two nominees were Tom Tully, for his work in "The Caine Mutiny"—and Edmond O'Brien, who played in "The Barefoot Contessa."

The nominees were unveiled with all the splendor of a big Hollywood premiere on a lavish television show and "nominee" parties in plush Hollywood niteries.

It was the first time in the academy's 27-year-old history that filmville made a big event out of the nominations. In the past the production has come only on the final announcement of the winners, to be made this year on March 30.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

THE heart has had its time. You'll still find it on some Valentine cards, true, but it's dated. In the cant language of art and literary critics, it isn't contemporary.

Physiologists long ago exploded the idea that the heart is the seat of the emotions. But popular knowledge as usual lags behind science.

Valentines of the future may carry a picture of some other internal organ—perhaps the liver. That would be more appropriate for this bilious age.

We moderns are great ones for dispelling myths and illusions. So we should be prepared to receive Valentine cards bearing a picture of the spleen, or perhaps the vermiform appendix.

You know that proverb about the way to a man's heart being through his stomach? Well, it's old hat. The girls aren't interested in reaching a man's heart any more. They know that even if they do get there, they won't find anything more exciting than some auricles and ventricles, and a couple of valves, corroded around the hinges by nicotine.

Nobody wants to go on a tedious pilgrimage through the vital organs these days. Contemporary Valentines therefore are likely to carry pictures of the stomach itself.

For funny Valentines, they will have pictures of a diaphragm contorted with hiccoughs.

Valentines for "that special Somebody" will carry a cross-sectional micrograph of a ganglion being activated by a nerve impulse of the kind which in former days was described by the quaint title of "Love."

Recently I heard a little girl reciting one of those playground rhymes, which usually are said with ever-increasing speed to accompany the movement of a skipping rope.

I can't remember the verses now, but they were long and distinctly gamey. The little girl said them in a gabble, looking pleased with herself, and obviously not understanding what the verses meant.

In fact the verses had no meaning, in the literal sense, but they conjured up a swarm of images, many of them strongly unpleasant.

They might well have been written by Ezra Pound or T. S. Eliot—except that the verses were probably old before Mr. Pound and Mr. Eliot were born.

It is a curious process—the handing down of such verses from one age-group to another, until generations have passed. Learned and very dull books could be written about playground rhymes.

Teachers would have an easier job if little girls applied themselves as fervently to lessons as they do to memorizing a skipping-rope song.

Expense-Sharing Caravan Holiday Turns Out To Be Happy Honeymoon

(The author, a Canadian who from being a minister of the Gospel, became "King of the Safecrackers" in the United States, now lives quietly among us on Vancouver Island. He concludes his story in Chapter 24 today.)

BY HERBERT EMERSON WILSON

(Copyright, Canada, 1955, by and The Daily Colonist)

That evening, and all the next day, I thought a lot about my visitor and her offer. Oddly, I found that both my interest in her as a person, and my determination not to sell the caravan, increased with the passing hours.

By the time she returned, next evening, I was quite determined to reject her offer even if she was ready to pay the full price.

We exchanged greetings and she entered the caravan, smiling all the while. In her, too, I sensed an increased interest both in myself and in the caravan. It was a bit of a surprise when she said, in a moment:

"I'm afraid the price of the caravan is beyond me."

This was what I'd wanted to hear, but just as I started to imagine myself off alone all summer, camping and fishing as I liked, she made a suggestion:

"While I'm not able to buy the caravan, I wondered if you'd consider us traveling together? We could share the current expenses on a 50-50 basis. You could sleep in the caravan, I on a cot in a tent outside, because I'm used to roughing it.

"You seem to be a clean-living, tidy person with a liking for outdoor life, camping and fishing. My interests are the same. I'm alone, you are alone, we both need companionship, so why shouldn't we get along?"

The proposition left me speechless for awhile. Then, thinking it over and watching her all the time, I said:

"Perhaps we could arrange such a business deal. When would you like to start?"

She had some personal matters to settle, but could be ready in about a month. I said I'd think her plan over, and let her know. She gave me her name (Amelia will do for here) and address, and departed with my name and my bank address, where I received all my mail.

Lying in bed that night sleep evaded me altogether as I mulled over Amelia's suggestion. Finally, in the middle of the night I rose, got my typewriter, and wrote her a letter accepting the whole idea.

Two days later she called again, when we shook hands to bind our agreement. Then days of planning followed, as we made ready for our journey.

One major question bothered both of us: What should be our alibi, or explanation to others, for our being together? Should I masquerade as her older brother, as her father, as her husband?

For myself I was not concerned, but Amelia was a member of a respectable family with no moral stain upon her character.

A few days went by in which we considered all the angles, then we found ourselves both slyly hinting that, from a social standpoint as well as from our personal feelings, marriage would be the logical thing.

A toast sealed our compact, and we proceeded at once with detailed planning. Defying convention and superstition, we decided to be married Friday, April 13, 1951. The ceremony was performed by a commissioner at the marriage license bureau and without fanfare we started on our honeymoon—with Spanish Banks as the first stop.

Our itinerary, with fishing for me and scenery for Amelia's painting in mind, had been drawn up for me by Vancouver's Pintail and Lee Straight. We were never disappointed.

From Spanish Banks we went up into the interior—over the Hope-Princeton highway—with stops at Hornet Lake and many other places where we fished and explored widely.

We were away about six months, making friends all along the way among white people and Indians alike, residents and other tourists included.

That winter we lived in the caravan in Vancouver, then in the spring traded it for a cottage and bit of property in Surrey. Amelia and I got busy with the cottage, repairing and decorating it, and within a few weeks sold it for almost double the value of our trade.

Our next home was at Cove Cliff in North Vancouver, but we grew restless there. Amelia found our caravan again, and repurchased it for half-price. Rebuilding our wheeled home, we set out again, this time on a tour of Vancouver Island.

In November, 1952, we settled here at Courtenay, where we both like the people, the town and the fishing. Selling the old caravan, we bought a cottage by the river.

We're content and happy—and we're building another caravan to take care of the next urge to wander.

Reformed Criminal Urges:

Prohibit Pistols To Curb Crime

Views of an ex-criminal on the outlaping of revolvers are expressed in this article by a native of Canada, who became "King of the Safecrackers" in the United States, paid for his wrongdoing in prison, and now lives on Vancouver Island.

BY HERBERT EMERSON WILSON

"This is a stick-up!"

How often we hear of those words, used by some pistol-whipping punk when he enters the store of an unprotected and frightened merchant.

If I were a politician I'd introduce a bill to do away with the revolver—the instrument of destruction, the all-powerful menace that encourages hoodlums as well as professional crooks to carry on their nefarious rackets.

Revolvers have always been, and now are, the main disturbers of society's equilibrium, constantly keeping the law-abiding citizens' nerves at highest tension, because of the boldness with which gunmen and racketeers invade Canadian homes, merchants' premises and banks, and stick up pedestrians on the streets.

A bill prohibiting the sale, use or ownership of revolvers should, in my opinion, apply to all firearms less than standardized rifle and shotgun length.

Moreover, the manufacturers of toy revolvers should come within the prohibition. This would make it rather difficult for the would-be stick-up man to simulate a real revolver.

The gunman, stripped of his sole protection, his "rod," becomes docile, harmless, cowardly.

The paramount purpose of prohibition of revolvers would be not only to render the active criminal helpless, but to impress on the mind of the potential criminal the futility of crime.

There are tremendous inroads being made yearly by suicide. Here, also, the principal weapon used is the revolver. Think of the many precious lives that might be saved if there were no revolvers at hand!

When a criminal, gunman or racketeer has been arrested, tried and convicted, the approximate cost to the taxpayers is $3,000. But that isn't all. I wish it were. For each year of his long prison term, the taxpayer must pay about $500 for the prisoner's maintenance, plus the pay of prison personnel.

What would be the reaction of the public if they, as individuals, were to receive from the government a bill for $500 every year, just before Christmas, for the upkeep of some pistol-whipping punk in the Big House?

The cold fact is, it really does cost taxpayers in Canada that astounding sum—and all because of crime committed, in most cases, because of a revolver held menacingly in the hand of a robber.

Every owner of a revolver is a potential murderer.

The criminal is ever ready to murder for his own self-protection in the event of a jam with the police. The non-criminal, during a heated argument or fight, not infrequently commits murder, because a revolver is ready to his hand.

Aside from the legitimate use police officers make of revolvers, what good are they? They are useless.

A bill prohibiting revolvers is greatly needed to stem the tide of atrocious and petty crimes being committed throughout Canada. It would be logical, timely, and above all, the only reasonably sure remedy for the greatest evil to which the Canadian people have ever been subjected.

Better Graft Veteran Soon

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS.

Peach Grafting—(F. E., Royal Oak). The best time to insert scions of other varieties into your Veteran peach is in early spring, just before growth starts. As Veteran is an early starter, and it looks like an early spring, I think you'd be well advised to get the job done immediately.

There is no particular harm done by waiting until the tree is in full leaf except that the March winds are rather drying, and it becomes a bit more difficult to keep the scion alive while union is taking place. If your scions are not too big, you might be able to construct a little air-tight tent of polythene plastic film around the completed graft, sealing the seams with Scotch tape. This will put each graft into a little greenhouse of its own.

* * *

Japanese Orange Tree—(J. A. M., Victoria). The seeds of oranges, lemons, and grapefruit will all germinate freely if sown in rather sandy soil and kept watered. It isn't easy to get them to flower, though, and your best bet with your Japanese orange seeds would be to sow from four to six of them together in a four-inch pot. Give them plenty of water and the sunniest window in the house, but no fertilizer. The congestion and crowding, plus the slim diet, will often force them into flowering while still quite young.

* * *

Early Lawn Mowing—(J.G.B., Oak Bay). You can't hurt your lawn by mowing it early, and especially after the mild fall and winter, and good growing weather we have had, a close mowing will do your lawn a lot of good.

Try to pick a dryish spell for the job, as it isn't good for the lawn to go walking on it when it is wet and soggy—it packs the soil and excludes air from the roots.

If you don't have a grass catcher on your mower, be sure to rake up all the clippings. These mowings are good for the lawn in summer, and when they are very small and finely chopped, but not at this season of the year, and not when the cut is heavy.

Garlic Culture—N.N.L., Nanaimo). You don't have to send away to a seedsman to buy garlic cloves for planting. The packaged bulbs you buy at the grocer's for cooking and flavoring are quite satisfactory.

Split the bulbs up into single cloves, and plant them just as you would onion sets, spacing them six inches apart in the row, with the tip of each clove just showing through the soil. Below the bulbs, where the roots will emerge, the soil should be loose and well worked, but the surface should be made very firm by treading around the bulbs. Lift in late July or early August, when the foliage turns yellow, and lay in a sunny place to dry off before storing.

Antirrhinum Rust — L. F. R., Victoria). Once a snapdragon plant is infected with the rust disease, there is no known cure, and the only thing to do is to pull up and burn ruthlessly any plants showing the little brown pustules on the undersides of the leaves.

While snapdragons are actually perennials, I am very much opposed to the practice of carrying old plants over the winter, as I believe this gives the disease a chance to get a real foothold, endangering both our own and our neighbors' gardens. My snaps are consigned to the incinerator every fall.

If you are setting out new snapdragon plants this spring, they had better go in a different site, as the soil is almost sure to be contaminated with the rust spores. If this move is impossible, then skim off the top two inches of soil, give the site a good dressing of hydrated lime, a cupful to the square yard, and replace with fresh, uncontaminated soil.

Cutting Up for the Girls

"A few" little girls are going to be thrilled tomorrow when they receive the results of the Valentine's toil of 11-year-old Byron Wright, 2928 Blackwood. Byron wouldn't say whether "a few" means one or ten. But he blushed a little. (See story on Page 5.)

Britain at Odds with Stand

U.S. Refuses To Appease Reds With Nationalist Island Chain

Little Hope Seen To End Fighting

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has told Britain that it is out of the question to surrender any Nationalist-held coastal islands to the Chinese Communists merely in the hope of inducing the Reds to stop fighting.

Britain has officially advised the United States of its view that all the coastal islands—including the Quemoys and Matsus—belong to Red China, although the Reds should not fight to get them.

Some U.S. officials fear this notification was the beginning of British pressure to get the United States to induce Nationalist China to turn more and more of the islands over to the Reds.

U.S. policy does not, in fact, rule out the possibility some day of a settlement which would let the coastal islands go to the Communists in return for a firm Communist agreement recognizing a non-Communist status for Formosa.

LONG WAY OFF

But any such deal now appears to be a long way in the future and officials said that, so long as the Peiping government continues to assert its intention to capture Formosa, the United States considers Quemoy, the Matsus and perhaps other off-shore islands to be strategically important for Formosa's defense.

Some days ago Premier Chou En-lai of Red China was reported in dispatches from London to have let it be known that while he would not negotiate a formal cease-fire, he would accept one if the Chinese Nationalists would get out of all the coastal islands.

U.S. officials said privately that under this proposal the free world would be "appeasing" Chou while he retained without check his announced designs on Formosa.

Differences between London and Washington over the Quemoy-Matsu island line become potentially more significant now that the evacuation of the Tachen islands far to the north has been completed.

A new period in the Formosa crisis, concentrated on diplomatic efforts for peace, is opening up and agreement between the United States and Britain—the maintenance of a co-operative if not solid front on major Formosa questions—will prove more important than in the recent past.

LONDON (AP)—The Soviet Union disclosed Saturday it is plugging for a Geneva-type conference on Formosa with the Chinese Reds at the table and the Chinese Nationalists left out in the cold.

Moscow radio announced that foreign minister V. M. Molotov had proposed that Britain and India join in trying to persuade the United States to agree to a 10-nation meeting either in Shanghai or New Delhi later this month.

In Washington, informed officials said Britain and the United States have decided such a conference without Nationalist China would be unproductive and have rejected the proposal.

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — The U.S. 7th Fleet returned to Formosa Sunday with the evacuated Tachen garrison but even before it arrived the Nationalists reported armed Communist junks massing near Matsu—an island the nationalists hope the fleet will defend.

Talks Avert Strike Action By CBC Men

OTTAWA (CP)—A strike of CBC radio and television technicians was averted late Saturday when negotiators reached a basis of settlement in the contract dispute.

A joint announcement by the CBC and the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians (CIO-CCL) said the tentative agreement is subject to ratification by the CBC and the union's 775 members in the corporation.

Details of the agreement were not disclosed.

The announcement was made at the labor department headquarters by Andre Lapointe, CBC industrial relations chief, and Timothy J. O'Sullivan, the union's international representative in Canada.

The two officials headed negotiation teams which conferred for several hours during the day in the presence of labor department conciliators.

After the joint statement was issued, a CBC spokesman said there remain a few details to be ironed out but that this is expected to be done today or Monday.

NO STATEMENTS

Pending negotiation of the remaining details, representatives of the CBC and the union have agreed to make no further statements concerning what will be in the contract.

The often-adjourned negotiations between the two disputants resumed after top officials of both sides met separately with labor department officers.

The strike could have crippled CBC radio and TV broadcasting, but the CBC stated it had made plans to carry on with a reorganized and part-time service.

The union claimed—and the CBC denied — that it had obtained a copy of the corporation's plan for continuing operations during a strike.

O'Sullivan said the plan involved a deal with another union for strike-breaking.

Antigua Next Stop For Royal Tourist

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (Reuters)—Some 12,000 children staged a rally for Princess Margaret before her departure from Barbados on the next stage of her West Indies tour.

After inspecting the rally at Garrison Savannah, near St. Ann's Fort, and hearing the children sing, she was to go to Bridgetown's Trafalgar Square to review a farewell guard of honor mounted by the Barbados Regiment.

Soon afterwards, the Royal yacht Britannia was to set out on the 300-mile voyage to Antigua, next port of call on Margaret's month-long tour.

Friday the princess went swimming for the second consecutive day at the private beach owned by Ronald Tree, former British Conservative Member of Parliament for Market Harborough. She is a childhood friend of Tree's sons, Michael and Jeremy.

She also attended the Barbados trade and industry fair in Queen's Park, and clapped when a band played a special number entitled "All Hail the Royal Princess." It was composed in her honor by V. A. Southwell, a local school teacher.

Old Friends May Meet

LONDON (AP) — Marshal Georgi Zhukov, new Russian defense minister, would like to visit his wartime friend, President Eisenhower, when relations between their nations improve, Moscow radio said Saturday night.

Return Of Tots Asked

NELSON, B.C. (CP)—A delegation of about 30 Sons of Freedom Doukhobors called on Emmet W. Gulley, secretary of the local co-ordinating committee on Doukhobors, here Saturday and asked his assistance in having their children returned.

More than 70 Freedomite children are wards of the department of welfare at New Denver where they are schooled and cared for in a converted sanitarium.

The children were taken into custody when their parents were jailed or refused to send them to public school.

Mr. Gulley advised the Freedomites, mostly women, to avail themselves of the legal processes provided.

De Gaullists Spurn Pflimlin

PARIS (UP)—The powerful right-wing followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle refused last night to join the proposed government of Premier-Designate Pierre Pflimlin, greatly reducing his chances of winning National Assembly approval next week.

However, the 48-year-old Pflimlin still may succeed in forming a cabinet to replace the government of Pierre Mendes-France ousted by the assembly last Saturday.

Southern New Brunswick Hit By Driving, Rain-Lashed Gale

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—A rain-lashed gale raked southern News Brunswick with winds gusting to 90 miles an hour Saturday, leaving scenes reminiscent of Hurricane Edna's ravages last September.

The storm formed suddenly over the New England states and moved across the border with little warning, tearing down hydro wires and disrupting communications.

Thirty head of cattle had to be destroyed when a barn collapsed before the battering winds at nearby Lancaster. Near Moncton, a 50-foot brick chimney crashed atop a glass greenhouse and winds ripped a porch roof from a house and planted it high in a tree.

Power failures were general throughout southern New Brunswick and almost half the telephone lines from Saint John were down. Police roped off the downtown plant of the New Brunswick Power Commission when winds snapped lines leading from the building.

HIGHWAY FLOODED

A foot of water flooded the Moncton Highway near here and high seas on the Bay of Fundy kept the Digby, N.S., ferry Princess Helene tied up at her pier.

Live wires fell across a factory in Moncton, starting five minor fires and causing $500 damage.

Nova Scotia was caught in the fringe of the storm, but winds gusted to 65 miles an hour at Shearwater naval air station, near Halifax.

The 16,000-ton Greek liner Nea Hellas manoeuvred about the harbor for three hours before pilots could tie her up.

Movieland Nominates Top Choices for Annual Oscar Awards

GRACE KELLY

AUDREY HEPBURN

DOROTHY DANDRIDGE

JUDY GARLAND

MARLON BRANDO

BING CROSBY

HUMPHREY BOGART

JAMES MASON

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Judy Garland, Grace Kelly, Jane Wyman, Audrey Hepburn and Dorothy Dandridge were nominated last night for the annual "Oscar" award as "Best Actress of 1954."

The workers of movieland also named their five choices for best actor, best motion picture and "best" of everything else that goes into making screen plays.

Nominated for the "Best Actor" award, to be handed out with the other "Oscars" by the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences March 30, were:

Marlon Brando, the tough dockworker of "On the Waterfront"; Bing Crosby, the has-been singer who loses himself in alcohol in "The Country Girl"; Humphrey Bogart, the tyrannical "Captain Queeg" of "The Caine Mutiny"; Dan O'Herlihy, who played the title role in "Robinson Crusoe," and James Mason, the alcoholic actor who commits suicide in "A Star Is Born."

Miss Wyman played the doctor's wife in "Magnificent Obsession," the 1954 version of the best-seller of the 1930s. Miss Kelly attempted to save Crosby in "The Country Girl." Miss Garland was the unknown girl who rose to stardom in "A Star Is Born." and Miss Hepburn was the chauffeur's daughter in love with her father's employer in "Sabrina."

Miss Dandridge, the first Negro nominated for a "Best Actress" award, played the cigarette girl in "Carmen Jones."

The five best movies were:

"Caine Mutiny," from the best-seller and stage play about a mutiny aboard a U.S. destroyer escort vessel;

"On the Waterfront," the tough story of labor racketeering on the docks;

"The Country Girl," from Clifford Odet's story of the alcoholic singer who is a has-been;

"Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," a backwoods musical;

"Three Coins in the Fountain," the story of three girls in Italy seeking romance.

Five film beauties were nominated for best supporting actress of last year. They were Jan Sterling, Eva Marie Saint, Claire Trevor, Nina Foch and Katy Jurado.

"On the Waterfront" walked off with three of the five nominations for the "Best Supporting Actor" role by placing Lee Cobb, Karl Malden and Rod Steiger on the ballot for the finals. The other two nominees were Tom Tully, for his work in "The Caine Mutiny" and Edmond O'Brien, who played in "The Barefoot Contessa."

The nominees were unveiled with all the splendor of a big Hollywood premiere on a lavish television show and "nominee" parties in plush Hollywood niteries.

It was the first time in the academy's 27-year-old history that filmville made a big event out of the nominations. In the past the production has come only on the final announcement of the winners, to be made this year on March 30.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

THE heart has had its time. You'll still find it on some Valentine cards, true, but it's dated. In the cant language of art and literary critics, it isn't contemporary.

Physiologists long ago exploded the idea that the heart is the seat of the emotions. But popular knowledge, as usual, lags behind science.

Valentines of the future may carry a picture of some other internal organ—perhaps the liver. That would be more appropriate for this bilious age.

We moderns are great ones for dispelling myths and illusions. So we should be prepared to receive Valentine cards bearing a picture of the spleen, or perhaps the vermiform appendix.

You know that proverb about the way to a man's heart being through his stomach? Well, it's old hat. The girls aren't interested in reaching a man's heart any more. They know that even if they do get there, they won't find anything more exciting than some auricles and ventricles, and a couple of valves, corroded around the hinges by nicotine.

Nobody wants to go on a tedious pilgrimage through the vital organs these days. Contemporary Valentines therefore are likely to carry pictures of the stomach itself.

For funny Valentines, they will have pictures of a diaphragm contorted with hiccoughs.

Valentines for "that special Somebody" will carry a cross-sectional micrograph of a ganglion being activated by a nerve impulse of the kind which in former days was described by the quaint title of "Love."

Recently I heard a little girl reciting one of those playground rhymes, which usually are said with ever-increasing speed to accompany the movement of a skipping rope.

I can't remember the verses now, but they were long and distinctly gamey. The little girl said them in a gabble, looking pleased with herself, and obviously not understanding what the verses meant.

In fact the verses had no meaning, in the literal sense, but they conjured up a swarm of images, many of them strongly unpleasant.

They might well have been written by Ezra Pound or T. S. Eliot—except that the verses were probably old before Mr. Pound and Mr. Eliot were born.

It is a curious process—the handing down of such verses from one age-group to another, until generations have passed. Learned and very dull books could be written about playground rhymes.

Teachers would have an easier job if little girls applied themselves as fervently to lessons as they do to memorizing a skipping-rope song.

Expense-Sharing Caravan Holiday Turns Out To Be Happy Honeymoon

(The author, a Canadian who from being a minister of the Gospel, became "King of the Safecrackers" in the United States, now lives quietly among us on Vancouver Island. He concludes his story in Chapter 24 today.)

BY HERBERT EMERSON WILSON

(Copyright, Canada, 1955, by Herbert Emerson Wilson and The Daily Colonist)

That evening, and all the next day, I thought a lot about my visitor and her offer. Oddly, I found that both my interest in her as a person, and my determination not to sell the caravan, increased with the passing hours.

By the time she returned, next evening, I was quite determined to reject her offer even if she was ready to pay the full price.

We exchanged greetings and she entered the caravan, smiling all the while. In her, too, I sensed an increased interest both in myself and in the caravan. It was a bit of a surprise when she said, in a moment:

"I'm afraid the price of the caravan is beyond me."

This was what I'd wanted to hear, but just as I started to imagine myself off alone all summer, camping and fishing as I liked, she made a suggestion:

"While I'm not able to buy the caravan, I wondered if you'd consider us traveling together? We could share the current expenses on a 50-50 basis. You could sleep in the caravan, I on a cot in a tent outside, because I'm used to roughing it.

"You seem to be a clean-living, tidy person with a [illegible] ing and fishing. My interests are the same. I'm alone, you are alone, we both need companionship, so why shouldn't we get along?"

The proposition left me speechless for awhile. Then, thinking it over and watching her all the time, I said:

"Perhaps we could arrange such a business deal. When would you like to start?"

She had some personal matters to settle, but could be ready in about a month. I said I'd think her plan over, and let her know. She gave me her name (Amelia will do for here) and address, and departed with my name and my bank address, where I received all my mail.

Lying in bed that night sleep evaded me altogether as I mulled over Amelia's suggestion. Finally, in the middle of the night I rose, got my typewriter, and wrote her a letter accepting the whole idea.

Two days later she called again, when we shook hands to bind our agreement. Then days of planning followed, as we made ready for our journey.

One major question bothered both of us: What should be our alibi, or explanation to others, for our being together? Should I masquerade as her older brother, as her [illegible]

For myself I was not concerned, but Amelia was a member of a respectable family with no moral stain upon her character.

A few days went by in which we considered all the angles, then we found ourselves both slyly hinting that, from a social standpoint as well as from our personal feelings, marriage would be the logical thing.

A toast sealed our compact, and we proceeded at once with detailed planning. Defying convention and superstition, we decided to be married Friday, April 13, 1951. The ceremony was performed by a commissioner at the marriage license bureau and without fanfare we started on our honeymoon—with Spanish Banks as the first stop.

Our itinerary, with fishing for me and scenery for Amelia's painting in mind, had been drawn up for me by Vancouver's Pintail and Lee Straight. We were never disappointed.

From Spanish Banks we went up into the interior—over the Hope-Princeton highway—with stops at Hornet Lake and many other places where we fished and explored widely.

We were away about six months, making friends all along the way among white people and Indians alike, residents and other tourists included.

[illegible] we lived in the caravan in Vancouve., then in the spring traded it for a cottage and bit of property in Surrey. Amelia and I got busy with the cottage, repairing and decorating it, and within a few weeks sold it for almost double the value of our trade.

Our next home was at Cove Cliff in North Vancouver, but we grew restless there. Amelia found our caravan again, and repurchased it for half-price. Rebuilding our wheeled home, we set out again, this time on a tour of Vancouver Island.

In November, 1952, we settled here at Courtenay, where we both like the people, the town and the fishing. Selling the old caravan, we bought a cottage by the river.

We're content and happy—and we're building another caravan to take care of the next urge to wander.

Reformed Criminal Urges:

Prohibit Pistols To Curb Crime

Views of an ex-criminal on the outlawing of revolvers are expressed in this article by a native of Canada who became "King of the Safecrackers" in the United States, paid for his wrongdoing in prison, and now lives on Vancouver Island.

BY HERBERT EMERSON WILSON

"This is a stick-up!"

How often we hear of those words, used by some pistol-whipping punk when he enters the store of an unprotected and frightened merchant.

If I were a politician I'd introduce a bill to do away with the revolver—the instrument of destruction, the all-powerful menace that encourages hoodlums as well as professional crooks to carry on their nefarious rackets.

Revolvers have always been, and now are, the main disturbers of society's equilibrium, constantly keeping the law-abiding citizens' nerves at highest tension, because of the boldness with which gunmen and racketeers invade Canadian homes, merchants' premises and banks, and stick up pedestrians on the streets.

A bill prohibiting the sale, use or ownership of revolvers should, in my opinion, apply to all firearms less than standardized rifle and shotgun length.

Moreover, the manufacturers of toy revolvers should come within the prohibition. This would make it rather difficult for the would-be stick-up man to simulate a real revolver.

The gunman, stripped of his sole protection, his "rod," becomes docile, harmless, cowardly.

The paramount purpose of prohibition of revolvers would be not only to render the active criminal helpless, but to impress on the mind of the potential criminal the futility of crime.

There are tremendous inroads being made yearly by suicide. Here, also, the principal weapon used is the revolver. Think of the many precious lives that might be saved if there were no revolvers at hand!

When a criminal, gunman or racketeer has been arrested, tried and convicted, the approximate cost to the taxpayers is $3,000. But that isn't all. I wish it were. For each year of his long prison term, the taxpayer must pay about $500 for the prisoner's maintenance, plus the pay of prison personnel.

What would be the reaction of the public if they, as individuals, were to receive from the government a bill for $500 every year, just before Christmas, for the upkeep of some pistol-whipping punk in the Big House?

The cold fact is, it really does cost taxpayers in Canada that astounding sum—and all because of crime committed, in most cases, because of a revolver held menacingly in the hand of a robber.

Every owner of a revolver is a potential murderer.

The criminal is ever ready to murder for his own self-protection in the event of a jam with the police. The non-criminal, during a heated argument or fight, not infrequently commits murder, because a revolver is ready to his hand.

Aside from the legitimate use police officers make of revolvers, what good are they? They are useless.

A bill prohibiting revolvers is greatly needed to stem the tide of atrocious and petty crimes being committed throughout Canada. It would be logical, timely, and above all, the only reasonably sure remedy for the greatest evil to which the Canadian people have ever been subjected.

Garden Notes

Better Graft Veteran Soon

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS.

Peach Grafting—(F. E., Royal Oak). The best time to insert scions of other varieties into your Veteran peach is in early spring, just before growth starts. As Veteran is an early starter, and it looks like an early spring, I think you'd be well advised to get the job done immediately.

There is no particular harm done by waiting until the tree is in full leaf except that the March winds are rather drying, and it becomes a bit more difficult to keep the scion alive while union is taking place. If your scions are not too big, you might be able to construct a little air-tight tent of polythene plastic film around the completed graft, sealing the seams with Scotch tape. This will put each graft into a little greenhouse of its own.

* * *

Japanese Orange Tree—(J. A. M., Victoria). The seeds of oranges, lemons, and grapefruit will all germinate freely if sown in rather sandy soil and kept watered. It isn't easy to get them to flower, though, and your best bet with your Japanese orange seeds would be to sow from four to six of them together in a four-inch pot. Give them plenty of water and the sunniest window in the house, but no fertilizer. The congestion and crowding, plus the slim diet, will often force them into flowering while still quite young.

* * *

Early Lawn Mowing—(J.G.B., Oak Bay). You can't hurt your lawn by mowing it early, and especially after the mild fall and winter, and good growing weather we have had, a close mowing will do your lawn a lot of good.

Try to pick a dryish spell for the job, as it isn't good for the lawn to go walking on it when it is wet and soggy—it packs the soil and excludes air from the roots.

If you don't have a grass catcher on your mower, be sure to rake up all the clippings. These mowings are good for the lawn in summer, and when they are very small and finely chopped, but not at this season of the year, and not when the cut is heavy.

Garlic Culture—N.N.L., Nanaimo). You don't have to send away to a seedsman to buy garlic cloves for planting. The packaged bulbs you buy at the grocer's for cooking and flavoring are quite satisfactory.

Split the bulbs up into single cloves, and plant them just as you would onion sets, spacing them six inches apart in the row, with the tip of each clove just showing through the soil. Below the bulbs, where the roots will emerge, the soil should be loose and well worked, but the surface should be made very firm by treading around the bulbs. Lift in late July or early August, when the foliage turns yellow, and lay in a sunny place to dry off before storing.

Antirrhinum Rust — L. F. R., Victoria). Once a snapdragon plant is infected with the rust disease, there is no known cure, and the only thing to do is to pull up and burn ruthlessly any plants showing the little brown pustules on the undersides of the leaves.

While snapdragons are actually perennials, I am very much opposed to the practice of carrying old plants over the winter, as I believe this gives the disease a chance to get a real foothold, endangering both our own and our neighbors' gardens. My snaps are consigned to the incinerator every fall.

If you are setting out new snapdragon plants this spring, they had better go in a different site, as the soil is almost sure to be contaminated with the rust spores. If this move is impossible, then skim off the top two inches of soil, give the site a good dressing of hydrated lime, a cupful to the square yard, and replace with fresh, uncontaminated soil.
